"LOYAL LEWIS"

ROLL OF HONOUR
(1914 AND AFTER.)

"How sleep the Brave who sink to rest
By all their Country's wishes blest!
When Spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallow'd mould,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than Fancy's feet have ever trod.

"By fairy hands their knell is rung,
By forms unseen their dirge is sung:
There Honour comes, a pilgrim gray,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay,
And Freedom shall awhile repair
To dwell a weeping Hermit there!"

THESE terrible war which burst on an astonished world a year ago, and which, after a course of unexampled violence and destructiveness, is apparently far from its fateful crisis, is of supreme and undying interest to the Island of Lewis. In no part of His Majesty's Dominions, home or oversea, has a rural community of under 30,000 souls made a finer response in manhood and efficiency to the call to Naval and Military service in defence of the Empire and its Allies, and all that the Empire champions—freedom for the man and the State all over the habitable world. This Hebridean contribution to the Forces by land and sea is remarkable, alike in numbers and variety of service, and this record, with the subjoined statistics, collected and arranged with great care by Mr William Grant, deserves, and will receive, handsome acceptance from Lewis men and women and their friends everywhere.

Many who are unacquainted with the interesting story of the Island and its more recent development are excusably surprised at the large quota of Lewis soldiers and sailors at present in the service of the Crown. For some enlightenment on the past and on the present, it may be stated that the Island has had a very substantial military tradition for centuries, since it, with other Highland districts, emerged from the "dark ages" of internecine tumult and barbarity. The episode of the Fife Adventurers early in the 17th century probably marked the critical stage in the transition to organised military practice and enlistment. At the Battle of Auldearn in 1645 a Lewis regiment was practically annihilated. Only three escaped, and among the killed was the Chamberlain of the Lewis (Donald Ban, brother of the Laird of Tulloch). But the Island was still turbulent, for Cromwell had a garrison in Stornoway, and in 1654 an unsuccessful siege of the strong Castle of Stornoway is recorded. In the ’45 twelve Lewis officers were nominated in Inverness, and at Sheriffmuir the Islanders, under Seaforth, formed part of the second line. Lewis gave serious concern to the authorities for a time thereafter, and a regular Government force was got ready to operate against its defiant clansmen. In the ’45, again, a Lewis Company with its local officers took the field. Passing down the years, we find that in 1793 and 1794 Francis, Lord Seaforth, raised two battalions, in the first of which three hundred Lewismen figured. The second battalion took the distinctive and far-famed title of the "Ross-shire Buffs." In 1804 another battalion was raised for the "Buff," and the Island contributed a large proportion. In a word, the renowned 78th Regiment had a fertile recruiting area in Lewis. Indeed, such was the drain on the population by recruiting that the Rev. Colin Mackenzie, Parish Minister of Stornoway, writing for the "Statistical Account" in 1795, says — "By reason of the multitudes levied for the Army and Navy, the great number of sub-tenants, and the many hands wanted for the fishing boats, labourers and farm servants are become very scarce and difficult to be found."

Since the Napoleonic struggle the military tradition has been continued and extended, and Lewis, in the Navy, the Army, and Militia, has long been represented from every village in the Island. The fighting record is magnificent. The Royal Naval Reserve was started in Stornoway in 1874, and for a long time was drilled annually at the Battery Station there—in its day the largest single station in the Kingdom. The physique and efficiency of the Reservemen were surpassed by none, according to official reports. In later years actual service aboard a man-of-war has been insisted on, and the local Training Station was discontinued. This splendid R.N.R. contingent, numbering about 2000, promptly answered the mobilisation summons of the Admiralty on the memorable 2nd August last year. It must, however, be kept in mind that the connection of Lewis with the regular Navy has been very close for fully a century, though the recruitment was not large, and that in this war up to date several Lewismen of the regular Navy, apart from R.N.R. seamen, have conspicuously distinguished themselves. The people will cherish the memories of the Heligoland Bight, the Falkland Islands, the North Sea Battle, and, with special regard, the brilliant exploit of the “Carmania.” The old Artillery Volunteers (1st Ross-shire), Stornoway, was supplanted some years ago by the new organisation, the Ross Mountain Battery (T.F.), and the Stornoway Company thereof is now valorously fighting in the dreary and blood-soaked slopes of the Dardanelles. With the Company are serving 41 of the Secondary pupils of the Nicolson Institute, actually on the working roll of the school when the war broke out, and former pupils also in large numbers have contributed to the splendid war record of this distinguished school. Nothing redounds more to the high credit of the Island’s endeavour in this world conflict than the voluntary enlistment of young men of Lewis birth or extraction, both at home (though furth of the Island), and in the Colonies, the States, the Argentine and elsewhere in foreign parts. From Canada alone some 250 Lewis lads are now in the trenches in Flanders. And the Island will remember with just pride that all through the progress of the war there has been a modest, but steady, local recruiting for all branches of the Forces—Regular, R.N.R., and Territorial.

Alas! that with all this military enterprise and pageantry the toll of life and limb by land and sea has been distressingly severe. Already the death casualties alone are well into the third hundred, and every week now little groups of men, maimed or hopelessly war-worn, are finding their way to the family hearths in all parts of the Island. Lewis is sorely stricken, and the patriotic devotion and the resignation of the inhabitants will, there is every reason to fear, have to face greater tribulation before Peace resumes its reign. Many pages will have to be added to this Roll of Honour. To all of us the abiding consolation remains that those who never come back have laid down their lives in one of the greatest causes in the history of mankind. Let us at home have an unflinching faith in the certainty of a triumphant issue to this stupendous struggle, and do our part, however humble, with a deep sense of personal obligation. There is a direct and very telling appropriateness at this moment in the words of a real poet:—

“Say not, the struggle naught availeth,
   The labour and the wounds are vain,
   The enemy faints not, nor faieth,
   And as things have been they remain.
If hopes were dupes, fears may be liars;
   It may be, in yon smoke concealed,
   Your comrades chase e’en now the fliers,
   And, but for you, possess the field.
For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,
   Seem here no painful inch to gain,
   Far back, through creeks and inlets making,
   Comes silent, flooding in, the main.
And not by eastern windows only,
   When daylight comes, comes in the light;
   In front the sun climbs slow, how slowly!
   But westward, look, the land is bright!”

—Clough.

With this beautiful and inspiring vision of ultimate victory the Roll may fitly open.

As a last word let the hope be expressed that the sons and daughters of the Island at home and abroad will unite in erecting a worthy and permanent local memorial and cenotaph to their countrymen who have suffered and died for their sakes in a noble cause.

Stornoway, August, 1915.

PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION.

A few words of supplementary preface are asked for now, though the revised Roll may be long in preparation.

The Great War seems at an end, at any rate in its active military aspect, and the nations, weary and debilitated, are labouring in the wake of the world-wide struggle towards a haven of assured peace and orderly life and development.

The “armed doctrine” of German might and presumptuous superiority, lately revealed fully to the world, has been more than successfully defied by her opponents, and there is much reason to believe that she is now surely, if secretly, laying to heart the stern lessons of a national collapse unparalleled in the history of mankind. She is certainly reaping the whirlwind where she sowed in many long years of insidious preparation against the liberties of peaceful nations. Social revolt and disorder for the time reign within her borders, and the Allies are unexpectedly confronted with the gravest anxiety as to the existence of a competent Governmental authority with which to treat in the final stages of the negotiations. In the paramount general interests of Europe they must exact the most binding guarantees from her if—what many weighty minds consider a practicable ideal—a United States of Europe, or a reasonable approximation thereto, is to displace the secret distrust and uncertainty of the old days. The glimmerings of a genuine democratic tendency on the part of a few of her present temporary rulers appear to give some faint hope that a repentant feeling is taking root. A change of heart is the necessary forerunner of a radical change in her domestic and international outlook and policy, and the very visible evidence of the overwhelming military resources of the victors will foster, if it does not enforce, this desirable orientation. Stricken Germany and the weaker nations that, to their own undoing, so disastrously backed her, cannot forget the awful past, however loud their present evasions and protests. As for the Allies the proper mood seems that reflected in the words of the "Recessional":—

"The tumult and the shouting dies;
The captains and the kings depart,
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, Lest we forget—lest we forget!"

and when Germany and her associates respond to this spirit the noonday of a better world is approaching.

In this short note the main chronicle of the war cannot find even a modest summary. For our own Empire the outstanding facts are the heroic and resistless valour of our soldiers and sailors, the marvellous resource and stability of our own nation and our comrade dominions and colonies, and our restraint and determination, alike in victory and casual defeat. In the darkest hours, and they were not few, faith in the justice of our ideals and in a victorious issue never really faltered, and never in our annals have the high purpose and material might of the Empire been more acclaimed throughout the world.

The story of the achievement of the Island of Lewis by land and sea is a glorious one. The recital of its losses in the finest of its manhood is, alas, harrowing! and in no phase of the war was the cry of lamentation nor the agony of anxious hearts absent in any village in the land. The fact that out of a population of less than 30,000 over 1000 gave up their lives, not to reckon the distressingly large proportion of wounded and permanently disabled who have been straggling back to their mourning homes, has stirred the hearts and won the admiration of our kinsmen everywhere, and of the nation at large.

The crowning sorrow of the "Iolaire," that inexplicable calamity of last New Year's Day, only remained to fill to overflowing the cup of universal grief for this Island. Verily, Lewis by its sacrifices has raised an imperishable monument to itself in the saddened hearts of our countrymen.

May the following pages be a widespread memorial, now and henceforth, of the days of high emprise, and, unhappily, of sore trial and affliction.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

In placing the First Edition of this Roll before the Public in December, 1915, I ventured to express the hope that it would commend itself to Lewis folk at home and abroad as a record not altogether unworthy of the magnificent part which the Island was playing in the great struggle then shaking the world. That hope was more than justified in the result. The book had a very cordial reception, and many flattering notices of it appeared in the Press of the home country and the Colonies. His Majesty the King graciously accepted a specially-bound copy of the Roll, thus bringing into still greater prominence the Island's fine war record. Scores of letters were received from natives of Lewis scattered all over the world, expressing a hope that a Final Edition would be published at the end of the war. In response to these requests I have compiled the present volume, which, as will be seen, is not a mere supplement to the former edition, but is complete in itself, embracing all that appeared in the earlier issue and continuing the record to the end of the war.

The production of such a Roll as this could not possibly be the unaided work of one man, and my first duty is to acknowledge here the ungrudging assistance received from friends in all parts of the Island. The original lists of names for the various districts were supplied by the school teachers, every one of whom, without exception, responded heartily to my appeal for their co-operation. They also revised the lists as rearranged, and in many instances corrected the proofs for their respective districts as the work was passing through the Press. Other friends, too, have assisted by supplying information with regard to casualties and in collecting photographs. To all these helpers sincere thanks is tendered. One prominent and patriotic Lewisman has been especially helpful—Dr J. L. Robertson, C.B., H.M. Senior Chief Inspector of Schools. Dr Robertson has throughout taken a keen and practical interest in the work of compilation, and from the appended initials he will be recognised as the writer of the Preface.

A few words as to the plan and scope of the Roll may be appropriate and useful.

It will be observed that a separate list is given for each of the thirty-six School Areas, and these are arranged in Parishes, following as far as practicable their geographical order. The Parish of Stornoway, for instance, commences at Aird and ends at North Tolsta; it is followed by the Parish of Barvas, commencing at Lionel and ending at Shawbost; Uig and Lochs are similarly treated.

In the First Edition the lists of names were arranged in alphabetical order, and classified according to Units of Service. In the present volume I have adopted a different plan, which, I believe, will be found more interesting and more convenient for reference. Each village is taken as a separate unit, and the names are arranged according to home address. The marginal figures in the lists are the croft numbers. In the case of Stornoway the lists are arranged by streets, and the following order has been followed:—(1) The sea front from Newton to Bayhead, including the back streets in the Newton district, the cross streets between South Beach and North Beach, and the side streets opening off Bayhead. (2) Streets running East and West, commencing with Scotland Street. (3) Streets running North and South, commencing with Kenneth Street. (4) The Castle policies and suburbs of the town.

By the arrangement adopted in compiling the lists, all the members of the same family are brought together, and each family's service, war honours, or losses can be seen at a glance. As there is scarcely a house but had at least one man serving, the Roll comprises an almost complete Directory for every village and hamlet in the Island.

Notes are appended in cases where men have been wounded, gas poisoned, shipwrecked, interned, or made prisoners. An asterisk (*) prefixed to a name denotes a man who gave his life in the struggle.

A series of Local Sketches preface the lists for each School District, in which are set forth the more outstanding features of interest in each locality’s record, as apart from the Island’s record as a whole. These sketches are accompanied by photographs of the writers, who also revised the lists for their respective districts. No one has taken a more practical interest in the publication of this Roll than Mr W. J. Gibson, M.A., Rector of the Nicolson Institute, who has added to much helpfulness and encouragement during its compilation by contributing a special article on the School’s record in the war. Hearty thanks are also due to Lieut. Alex. J. Macleod for a graphic and racy account of the service rendered by the Ross Mountain Battery.

Following the Lewis lists will be found a section allotted to the record of the part taken in the great war by Glasgow Lewismen, contributed by Mr Neil M. Macleod (“Godred Crovan”), and a special section is devoted to the Iolaire Disaster.

As an appendix there is included a series of statistical tables which no doubt will have interest for some. One set shows how the men from each district were distributed according to units of service; in another set each district’s quota is arranged according to clan names. Incidentally these latter reveal some interesting facts with regard to the distribution of the clans throughout the Island. The Macleods, it will be seen, easily lead for numbers in all four parishes, and the name figures among the men serving from every school district except those of Achmore and Aridhbhruaich. They head the list for every school area in the Parish of Stornoway, except North Tolsta, where they take second place to the Macivers, and are almost equalled by the Murrays. In the Ness district the Macleods have to yield pride of place to the Morrisons. At Airidhantoum the Macdonalds easily come first, followed by the Morrisons and Smiths. At Barvas and at Shawbost the Macleods are in an overwhelming majority, while at Bragar they are closely followed by the Mackays, Campbells and Smiths. Passing to the Parish of Uig, it will be seen that the Buchanans are the most numerous at Islivig, Mackays at Valtos, Macdonalds at Bernera and at Crowlista, Macivers and Macleans at Breasclet. The strength of the Macleods at Carloway and Duncarloway, however, places them at the head of the list for the Parish. In Lochs Parish the Mackenzies are the most numerous at Grimshader and Knockiandue, the Finlaysons at Planasker, and the Mackays at Achmore. At Fidigary the Macleods are more than three times as numerous as the Mackenzies, who come next in order. At Luerbost, too, they are in a substantial majority.

Freedom from error is not claimed for this Roll, but an earnest endeavour has been made to make the information given correct, and as far as possible complete; and to this end no effort has been spared.

The purpose of this volume is to give in permanent form a record of the Island’s war service, and to perpetuate the memory of the men who sacrificed their lives in the great struggle. If that purpose has been in some worthy measure achieved, my labours in connection with its compilation are amply rewarded.

Stornoway, October, 1920.

W. G.
"ENNoblED BY THEIR SACRIFICE."

TRIBUTE BY LORD LEVERHULME.

Lewis is proud of its record in the Great War, proud of land in active fight in the War, and strenuous efforts the achievements of its brave sons and daughters on sea in munition factory. Lewis is proud of the fact that it supplied 6172 men wearing His Majesty’s uniform on sea and land, and we all mourn that of these 1151 were called to make the supreme sacrifice.

Blood was poured out like water, money was counted as dross until our one-time most powerful military foe was defeated and crushed. Not until liberty and civilisation were made secure and safe, not until our homes, mothers, wives and children were freed from the menace of the invader did the brave efforts of our unconquerable Lewismen cease. They with their comrades were the saviours of the British nation, the saviours of the Empire, they were the liberators of mankind. Not until victory was assured did our valiant Lewismen return home to their beloved Island, to their anxious mothers, their loving, waiting wives or sweethearts, their bonnie children and the crofts they knew and cultivated. They have not been demoralised—they have been ennobled by their sacrifice, and it is now for us to prove ourselves worthy of them by making life in Lewis higher, better, more complete and fuller of all that goes to make life happy, joyous and comfortable than it was when they left it at the outbreak of War.

They have won the War: it is now for us to win the peace and to make our Island fragrant with hopes and possibilities for a brighter and more glorious future than ever Lewis men and women experienced in the past.

Let us set ourselves to work to record in lasting stone and bronze the memory of these brave Lewismen and of their valiant deeds, so that we and generations yet unborn may be inspired to emulate their glorious example.

LEVERHULME.
PARISH OF STORNOWAY.
The rumours of war in the closing days of July, 1914, were suddenly changed to its grim actualities when, on 4th August, Great Britain formally made her entry into the greatest conflict in the world's history. Nearly all the young men of the district belonged to the Royal Naval Reserve or the Militia. Consequently the news that we were about to engage in mortal combat with the greatest military nation in the world was received with staggering amazement, quickly followed by calm resolution and determination to serve their King and Country with all their powers of brain and arm. From this district there was an immediate response to the Nation's cry—"To Arms!"—not only by those who were in duty bound to go, but also by those who had had no military training. Many of these were actually under military age, but being big and sturdy, they pretended to be older than they really were, and their services were accepted. There was no need for conscription here. The young men who had gone to the Colonies were just as eager to serve as those at home. Many came over at their own expense; others came with the Colonial contingents.

During the progress of the war the people took a keen, intelligent interest in the waging conflicts on the various fronts, and followed the changing battle lines with the aid of maps. Even in the darkest days they were confident of the final issue. When the war telegram announced a retreat of the Allies, they comforted themselves by believing it to be a strategic move that would ultimately lead to victory. The children were not a whit behind their seniors in their eagerness to help, and they collected close on £100 for various war charities.

Mr. Angus MacDonald, Aird Public School

The signing of the Armistice on 11th November, 1918, caused great joy, and many flags were hoisted. Now there would be no more casualties, but, alas! the tragic wreck of the "Iolaire" on New Year's morning sent a thrill of horror and sorrow, not only throughout the Island but also throughout the whole Empire. In that tragedy this district alone lost 21 precious lives. Amongst the band of heroes overwhelmed in that night of terror, four stood pre-eminent in physical mould and Christian courage—Alick Maciver, 12 Shader: Angus Mackay, Hillside, Shader; Alick Mackenzie, Lochside, Aird; and Alick Mackenzie, No. 1, Aird. Relying on Him who rules the elements, they were cool and fearless midst the raging breakers and the crashing of the doomed ship. Thinking not of self, they eagerly helped others to a means of escape. Thus they died as they had lived—ever ready to lend a helping hand to a brother in need.

The first from this district to fall in the war was Duncan Campbell, No. 6 Broker, who was mortally wounded at the Aisne in 1914. Donald Macleod, 10 Portnaguran, sustained the crushing loss of four sons.

The names on the Roll of Honour for the School District, which number 393, or whom 74 have fallen, includes the following:—1 Warrant Officer, 1 Captain, 3 Lieutenants; Naval Officers—1 Warrant Officer, 1 Commander (United States Navy). The Honours List shows 1 D.C.M., 4 M.M., 3 Russian Decorations, 1 Italian Decoration, and quite a number of 1914 Stars. Details will be found on the next page.

3. MACIVER—ANGUS, Gunner, R.N.R., killed in action with the "Moewe," Dec., 1917; aged 42 years (son of Mr. Angus Maciver). NORMAN, Gunner, R.N.R. JOHN, R.N.R.—Three cousins. ANGUS, Mate, R.N.R. (son of Mr. Norman Maciver, Merchant), was awarded the Russian Decoration of St. Stanislas for "devotion to duty" in the White Sea, where he took part in the clearing of a large enemy minefield, his own ship blowing up.

4. MACLEOD—DONALD, Sergt., Gordons; was twice wounded, FINLAY, Pte., R.N.R.; died September, 1919, from the effects of an illness contracted on service. KENNETH, Gunner, R.N.R.; drowned, 20th October, 1918, when the ship on which he was serving as gunner caught fire in a storm, and the patrol ships were unable to render assistance.

He was 33 years of age, and had been on service from the commencement of hostilities (sons of Mr. Finlay Macleod).

8. MACDONALD—DONALD, Gunner, R.N.R., survivor from H.M.S. "Formidable," torpedoed, 1st Jan., 1915. "For more than 24 hours they were tossed about on a stormy sea in a damaged boat, which leaked so freely and shipped seas so frequently that constant bailing by all who were able was an absolute necessity. Many of the men were scantily clad, and the weather was bitterly cold. Notwithstanding this, Donald doled his canvas jumper and stuffed it into a breach in the boat's side. Many of the men succumbed to the terrible exposure. The survivors were too weak and benumbed to drop their unfortunate mates overboard, so the bodies of the dead lay awash in the bottom of the boat. The living tried to retain some warmth in their bodies by appropriating the garments of the dead. The boat at length touched the beach at Lyme Regis. Donald and one other were the only survivors who were able, unaided, to walk to the nearest house, where they were hospitably entertained. MALCOLM, Gunner, R.N.R., interned in Holland. ALICK JOHN, Gunner, R.N.R.

SMITH—ALEX. (Jun.), Capt., Canadians; twice wounded. MALCOLM, Pte., Canadians; killed in France (sons of Mr. Angus Smith).

Portvoller Lad's Fight with Submarines in the Arctic Ocean.

In our issue of last week we announced the death of Gunner Alick John Macdonald, son of Mr Torquil Macdonald, Port Voller. He was a tall, strapping young man, cool, daring, and alert, and withal exceedingly shy. While serving as gunner on s.s. 'Palm Branch' he had a most exciting fight with two submarines in the Arctic, sinking one and probably disabling the other. On the arrival of his ship at Archangel he was presented with a Russian decoration for his excellent work. In a letter to his father he wrote:—"I was summoned to appear at the Russian Headquarters, and was ushered into the presence of ten officers and forty mariners. I was very shy. Before placing the medal on my breast the officers spoke to me for half-an-hour, complimenting me on my skill and gallantry." With his usual modesty, he forbade his father from sending his account of the fight to the Press. His many friends, however, will be pleased to read the thrilling story of his exciting adventure in the cold Arctic regions. We give an extract copy of his written description:

"Details of encounter with enemy submarines off Kola Inlet on May 4th, 1917. At 1.30 p.m. on 4th May land was sighted on the port bow. I left the cabin at 3.30 p.m., and directly having got to the top of the ladder which goes to the poop on the starboard side aft I saw the wake of a torpedo on the starboard quarter, passing from port to starboard, and reckoned it could not have passed our stern beyond 6 ft. at most. The gunner then on watch on the gun platform gave the alarm, which, however, proved useless, as the alarm signal given was not heard on the fore bridge. I got up on the platform, and saw the periscope and upper part of a submarine's conning tower on the port quarter, scarcely seventy yards away. We both rushed to the ammunition boxes. I happened to take that one which is always kept open in submarine waters. I loaded the gun, and while my mate trained on I ran the sights to zero and layed the gun at the bottom of his conning tower, and fired just as his decks were coming awash. The shell hit him right underneath the conning tower, and the explosion tore a great gap in his side and half-way up the tower. The gun was loaded a second time by my mate, and was layed this time abaft the conning tower. By this time the enemy was-listing to starboard and sinking slightly by the bow. The second shot was fired and hit him abaft the conning tower, the explosion of the shell sending up a huge volume of smoke and flame. Just as the second shot was fired the remaining numbers which comprised the gun crew were all on the gun platform, and the captain was giving the alarm on the fore bridge. By the time the third round was in the gun the enemy was gone—sunk—and No. 2 at the gun was reporting a periscope on the starboard quarter. The gun was immediately trained and layed on the said periscope, and fired at 4000 yards range. The third shot was fired and went over; the fourth fell short; the fifth fell right against the periscope. When the sixth round was in the gun he was gone, but whether hit or not none could tell. Then followed a pause of about eight minutes, after which he came right up a little less than four miles right astern. We opened fire at 7700 yards range. He replied with two guns of about much the same calibre as ours. After a time a great volume of smoke shot up from his foremost gun, after which he only fired one gun. After exchanging a few more rounds he turned round and headed for sea—and fled. . . ."

"LOYAL LEWIS" ROLL OF HONOUR.

Life on the Ocean Wave.

Lewis R.N.R.'s on H.M.S. "Hermione."

Lewis R.N.R.'s on H.M.S. "Carmania."
THE School District at last census returned a population of 2,129—896 males and 1,233 females. The number on military service during the war was 383—over 18 per cent. of the entire population, or 42.7 per cent. of males. Of these, 83, or 21.6 per cent. of the number on service, laid down their lives in defending us on sea and land. There are 24 war widows in the district. Ten families sustained double losses—those of Murdo Campbell, Evander MacKenzie, Kenneth MacKenzie, Garrabost; Mrs Maciver, Greenpark; Widow John Macaulay, Geilir; Peter Macleod, Alexander MacKenzie, Upper Bayble; Donald Macdonald, Farquhar Macrae, Park; and Donald Campbell, Lower Bayble.

It is hard to lose any member of the family, but it must be doubly trying to lose the only son. We had four such sad instances here. The "Iolaire" tragedy accounted for ten lives, bringing the total number of cases of drowning up to 30. Three young lads—Allan Graham, Garrabost; Donald Macleod (Colin), Upper Bayble, and Malcolm Maciver (Kenneth), Lower Bayble—fell the same day, in that ill-fated advance up the Tigris.

We shall not soon forget many incidents that impressed us during those years—the daily visit to the local Post Office, where the war news was eagerly scanned; the postman's morning call with news of life or sorrow; the anxious mother's morning task to have breakfast served before the postman's arrival should upset things; and the clergyman's heavy step along the village road on the painful errand of disclosing some sad news, or bringing the comfort of the Gospel to some stricken household. Several parents refused to be comforted, giving themselves over to sorrow and sinking under the burden. When this victory of Right over Might has cost so much to Lewis alone, how tremendous the total sacrifice made! What a blessing our sacrifices have not been in vain. Not in vain, indeed, for the world and humanity are, at least for a time—let us hope and pray it may be for ever—freed from the menace and tyranny of a domination that would mean nothing short of a hell upon our fair earth if an arrogant and cruel Prussianism had been triumphant. But thanks to an over-ruling Providence and the valour of our loyal sons, we have been spared so terrible a catastrophe.

D MACIVER, Schoolhouse, Bayble.

KNOCK SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Knock, Swordale and Aignish).

Population last Census, 845 (Males, 385; Females, 462).

This School District has given its best in the defence of King and Country during the world war, which has happily come to a close by the signing of the Peace Treaty with Germany. Out of a total of 383 males at the last census, there were 202 men (or 52.7 per cent. of the male population) on active service on sea and land, and of these 44, or 21.7 per cent., laid down their lives in the cause of Righteousness and the freedom of mankind throughout the world. They served in every theatre of war—from the plains of Flanders to the burning sands of Mesopotamia and Palestine.

The patriotism and zeal for the defence of King and Country shown by the older men at the beginning of the war spread among the boys attending school, so that many who were then of school age, before completing their sixteenth year joined up for military or naval training, and before attaining their eighteenth year were beating back the German hosts on the battlefields of France and Flanders. It should also be put on record that, while the war went on and our young men were enduring hardships and facing dangers in the trenches, many of our young women were engaged as munition workers in the South. Those at home were also doing their utmost to help the different agencies at work for providing comforts for our men on active service.

The toll of life has been distressingly severe, and the darkest cloud of all swept over the district on New Year's morning, 1919, which shall be remembered as long as the Atlantic waves beat on Lewis shores. On that morning over 200 of our gallant Navymen were launched into eternity on the Beasts of Holm within a stone-throw of the shore. Of the nine Navymen from this district on board the ill-fated Iolaire, only one escaped from the lamentable and awful catastrophe. The mourning and gloom cast over the district was appalling.

Many of our brightest and most promising young men, after enduring years of the burden and horrors of war, laid down their lives, and of these special mention may be made of 1st Lieut. John Macleod, Seaforth Highlanders, Swordale; 2nd Lieut. John Munro, M.A., Seaforth Highlanders, Aignish; 2nd Lieut. Donald Mackay, Seaforth Highlanders, Headmaster of Kilmaluag Public School, Skye, also from Aignish; and R.N.R. Malcolm Maciver, Assistant Master of John Neilston Institution, Paisley, Aignish.

The following were promoted during the war:—Major Donald M. Macrae, South African Medical Corps, Aignish Farm; Capt. Duncan M. Macrae, South African Medical Corps, Aignish Farm; 2nd Lieut. John Munro, M.A., Seaforth, Aignish; 2nd Lieut. Donald Mackay, Seaforths, Aignish; 2nd Lieut. Roderick Macleod, Seaforths, Aignish; 1st Lieut. Donald Macleod, South African Rifles, Aignish Farm.

Macrae—Donald M., Major, South African Medical Corps. Duncan M., Captain, South African Medical Corps.
"LOYAL LEWIS" ROLL OF HONOUR.

(Lost with S.S. "Merddio.")

*Lieut. John Munro, Seaforths, 27 Aignish.
Awarded M.C.
(Killed 15th April, 1913).

(Drowned 30th Jan., 1918).

*Scigt. Alex. John Macleod, Canadians, 5 Knock.
(Killed 6th Nov., 1913).

*William Mackenzie, R.N.R.
1a Swordale.
(Died in Turkey).

(Died 19th May, 1917).
EVEN before the trumpet of war sounded through the British Isles the Sabbath peace of our Township was disturbed by a notice issued by the Admiralty, calling upon all reservists to report for duty. This unexpected summons caused a profound sensation and filled every heart with uncomfortable forebodings which were more than fulfilled by the struggle that followed. Four reservists who were at home at the time—Neil Macdonald, Alex. Macdonald, Robt. MacKenzie, and Murdo Matheson left immediately by the "Sheila"—the first to leave the island. Mackenzie served in H.M.S. "Glasgow," and took part in the memorable battle of the Falklands. The whole four came through the war unscathed.

Although the inhabitants of this district are to a certain extent seafaring, they contributed more to the Army than to the Navy. Out of a total of 217 men called up, 98 served in the Navy as against 219 in the land forces. Of this total 30 made the supreme sacrifice.

There were several distressing cases of double bereavement:—Mr Alex. Macdonald, Holm, lost two sons—Donald, Lt.-Commander of the "Ascot," who was drowned when his ship was mined the day before the Armistice was signed; also John, drowned in the wreck of the "Iolaire." Mr John Macleod, 1 Holm, also lost two sons—John, a Sergeant in the H.L.I., and Donald, a private in the same regiment.

The late Mr James Macleod, Stenish, lost two sons: Malcolm, killed in the Spring offensive of 1918, and Thomas died in hospital from illness brought on by being gassed.

Mr Angus Macdonald, Stenish, had six sons in the Service, two of whom laid down their lives. Alexander, died in France, and Malcolm, a sergeant in the Canadians, killed while attempting to rescue a wounded comrade.

The most distinguished soldier from this district is Lieut.-Colonel John Macrae, a native of Branahuie. When war broke out he held the rank of Lieutenant, and was rapidly promoted until he finally attained the rank of Lieut.-Colonel. He was awarded the D.S.O. with bar for conspicuous bravery on the field. He was dangerously wounded in Mesopotamia, but made a good recovery. He had three brothers and two sons in the Service. His eldest son John, a most promising youth, was killed in action.

Sergt. Donald Macleod, Sandwick, was awarded the Military Medal and also the Distinguished Conduct Medal. Colour-Sergeant A. J. Thompson, Battery Park, the Distinguished Conduct Medal. C.P.O. Murdo Macaulay, Distinguished Service Medal, and Engineer Philip Morrison, Sandwick, Distinguished Service Medal.

"LOYAL LEWIS" ROLL OF HONOUR

Brevet-Major JOHN N. MACRAE, D.S.O.,
1st Battalion Seaforth Highlanders.
BREVET-MAJOR JOHN N. MACRAE, D.S.O., 1st Seaforth Highlanders, has had a brilliant career in the Army. In 1893, at the age of 16, he enlisted in the county regiment—the Seaforths. He served with the 2nd Battalion as Sergeant during the South African War (1899 to 1902), receiving the King's and Queen's Medals, with seven clasps. He was present at the Battles of Magersfontein and Paardeberg, as well as numerous other engagements throughout the war, and was mentioned in Lord Roberts' despatches for gallantry at Paardeberg. On 8th July, 1910, he was promoted Sergeant-Major (Warrant Officer), and on 25th February, 1914, was promoted to a commission as Lieutenant and Quartermaster to the 1st Battalion in India, joining that Battalion on 2nd May, 1914. In September he left India for active service in France, and was mentioned in despatches by Sir John French after the Battle of Neuve Chapelle in March, 1915, "for valuable, gallant, and distinguished services" in the field. He vacated his appointment as Quartermaster, and was appointed Captain and Adjutant of the Battalion on 18th August, 1915, and he was again mentioned in despatches for gallantry in action at the Battle of Loos, 25th Sept., 1915.

From France he went with his Battalion to Mesopotamia in December, 1915, and was honoured with the immediate award of the D.S.O. at the Battle of Sheikh Sa'ad, where "when all the senior officers had become casualties he took command of the Battalion, thereby saving a critical situation." In this action he was captured by the Turks, but escaped by the use of his fists, and carried on with the action. He was dangerously wounded (chest and right lung) in the attack on the Sann-i-yat position on 6th April, 1916, and was invalided to England. For his gallantry in this action he was promoted Brevet-Major. On 13th December, 1916, he rejoined his Battalion in Mesopotamia, and took part in General Maude's advance on and capture of Baghdad, 10th March, 1917. He was again mentioned by General Sir S. Maude for conspicuous gallantry at the Battle of Istablulat, between Baghdad and Samarra, 13th April, 1917. His great gallantry at the Battle of Telkrit on 5th November, 1917, won for him a bar to his D.S.O. The following is the official memorandum of the award:—"Though wounded in the early part of the battle, he commanded and carried on with a section of the attack, until again wounded very severely in the chest and left lung, in the capture of the second line of Turkish trenches."

From Mesopotamia he proceeded with his Battalion to Palestine in January, 1918, and in May of that year was appointed Temporary Lieut.-Colonel to command the 2/4th Battalion of the Devon Regiment. In August, 1918, he was appointed Commandant of the 21st Corps Reinforcement Training School in Palestine, and in September, 1918, was posted to command the 1/4th Battalion Wiltshire Regiment, taking part in General Sir E. Allenby's destruction of the Turkish Armies, September to October, 1918, and was again mentioned in despatches. He commanded the 1/4th Battalion Wiltshire Regiment in Palestine, Egypt, and the Sudan until October, 1919, when the Battalion was demobilised, and he relinquished the Temporary Rank of Lieut.-Colonel and rejoined his own Battalion Seaforths at Fort-George as a Brevet-Major.

In addition to the Queen's and King's South Africa Medals, with 7 clasps, he is in possession of the D.S.O. with Bar, Long Service and Good Conduct Medal, King's Coronation Medal, 1914 Star with Bar, General Service Medal, and Victory Medal. Brevet-Major Macrue, who is a son of Mr. Donald Macrue, Branhue, Stornoway, is one of four brothers who have served in the Army, and his own two sons served in their father's regiment, one of them, the eldest, alas, being killed in France.
“LOYAL LEWIS” ROLL OF HONOUR.

Brevet-Major JOHN N. MACKAR, D.S.O.,
1st Battalion Seaforth Highlanders.
The Ross Mountain Battery on Service.

EVEN such a brief account of the doings of the Battery as this, must make some mention of the war training period at Bedford. The training was rigorous in the extreme, and only the highest efficiency was tolerated. This was not more than we expected and wished, but in six months' time it was bound to pall and become a task very often trying and generally unpleasant, on account of the time of year. This was much more than compensated for by the very pleasant relations which were developed with the people of the town, and which extended as time went on. Not only did the intercourse with the townsfolk form a pleasant change from training, but it had an actual military value in that it welded together the many cliques within the Battery, and gave a painless death to the old inter-section rivalry which had in the meantime paid its way in providing an extra stimulus to training. We owe a great debt of gratitude to the good people of Bedford, and one would have much pleasure in dwelling on this most pleasant phase of the history of our Battery if space permitted.

After many alternating waves of optimism and despair, according to whether the rumour of the moment was that we were leaving on the umpteenth of next month 'sure' or were for Home Defence for the duration, we finally left in the third week of March, 1915. We had a pretty fair idea of what our destination was. We had been transferred some weeks earlier from the Highland Territorial (31st) Division to the 29th Regular Division. We reached Alexandria in the early days of April. Here the Brigade, consisting of the Ross and Argyll Batteries with their respective Ammunition Column sections, and Brigade Headquarters was taken over by Lieut.-Col. F. A. Wynter, D.S.O. We were again inspected by the Commander-in-Chief (Sir Ian Hamilton) and after a week or so in Chatty Camp embarked on the "Mercian" and joined the rest of the expedition in Mudros Bay, in the Island of Lemnos. Here for nearly a fortnight we practised slinging horses and guns from the ship to the horse-boats; landed a section once and did some drill ashore; and got lectures on the difficulties which were known to be ahead and some which we apprehended. The Divisional Commander's Address, of which every man got a copy, made it very clear that the landing was to be a very formidable undertaking, and that heavy casualties were expected.

The expedition left Mudros on the evening of the 24th of April. The morning of the 25th broke hazy. Before dawn one could hear the rumbling of heavy guns to the north-west. With dawn a heavy bombardment developed in our own neighbourhood. To the right front we could see the entrance to the Straits. On the Asiatic side of these, the Russian "Askold"—the "Packet of Woodbines"—with apparently innumerable light guns, was noisily supporting the landing of a French detachment. To our front were the precipes of Cape Helles and Tekke Burna, with between them the small beach (W), known since as Lancashire Landing. The village and forts of Sedd-el-Bahr on the European side of the entrance, beneath which the 'River Clyde' was run ashore, were being pounded by a couple of cruisers. Around us a good many battleships were shelling the trenches and wire entanglements between 'W' beach and Krithia. Heavier ships further out were hammering the landscape in a more or less general sort of way. The first boat load of casualties from 'W' beach had just come alongside when the Right Section was ordered to get into the horse-boats. We were towed in by a trawler, and landed without casualty—a happy accident which can only be attributed to the local disorganisation amongst the enemy due to the heroic attacks delivered by the shattered remnants of the 1st Lancs. Fusiliers.
COMMANDER OF THE BATTERY.

Major THOMAS NICOLSON, T.D.

Major Nicolson at outbreak of war was in command of the Stornoway Territorials (Left Section of Ross Mountain Battery). He proceeded on active service with them as Captain of the Battery, and was wounded at the Dardanelles, 29th June, 1915. Later commanded 2nd Ross Battery. Promoted Major, June, 1917. Invalided out February, 1919. Always a keen Territorial, he had completed 25 years' service.

We proceeded to the site of Helles Lighthouse and dug in. The drivers returned to the beach. The infantry were running out of ammunition and water. The drivers volunteered to supply them, and during the whole period of our stay at Helles, this extremely hazardous duty they made their own; and often when parties of infantry were running short of ammunition in hot corners, they were no less pleased than astonished to see some of these drivers leading their ponies at a canter across the open, loaded with the precious explosives. It was only to be expected that many of these should become victims both to the regular enemy and to the many snipers with whom the broken country swarmed at the beginning of the campaign. To the gunners the first night, although a bit of a nightmare, was only typical of many to follow. The infantry were so closely engaged all night that it was impossible to use the guns without endangering our own troops. A false message sent the Section back to the reserve trenches, but the error was discovered before dawn and the guns and ammunition were man-handled to the original position before daybreak. The following day we ran on to the crest in front and had some good shooting direct at retiring enemy infantry. That evening we were rushed into the Old Castle, an advanced post which had just been taken and which the enemy made two attempts to recapture during the night. The Section firing point blank, helped largely to repel these attacks. The following day we joined the French Corps, which now took over the right of the line, and on the 28th the Section alone supported a French attack, the rest of the artillery being unable to reach the position. The following day the Section was relieved by the Left, and the weary gunners got a day's sleep and a good feed—both badly needed. The following day we left French command. The same night the Left Section, in an awkward position, got one of their guns destroyed. About this time the two Batteries were amalgamated, as the Highland Mountain Battery casualties, which could not be replaced, made this essential.

It is unnecessary to give an account of doings from day to day. The Division had not much artillery. What there was ran short of ammunition. The nature of the ground made it impossible both for field and naval guns to reach many of the targets. There was no excuse for screw-guns not getting there even if we had to go up within a hundred yards of it. So it was that we got scattered, a gun here behind a trench parados, another enfilading the enemy firing line a little distance away on higher ground; another in the support trenches waiting for any enemy machine guns to show up; away to the left on Gurkha Bluff another can look right into a large extent of enemy trenches. A little further back the rest together lie ready to support our own or to crush the enemy's attacks. But positions were occupied only as long as there was no urgent cry from another part. One had to be ready to move wherever the need was most. The amazing accuracy of these guns would have made them popular even if any others were there to do the job. The guns were unshielded, and so the gunners had to work with next to no cover. The absence of a buffer often rendered it necessary for the detachment to retrieve the gun after every round, a fact which was much appreciated by enemy sharpshooters. Casualties were replaced from the drivers, who were, however, suffering grievously themselves. Some of the guns got worn out, and one had to be withdrawn. Disease—dysentery and enteric—began to spread. Many of the dead could not be buried, and the great heat brought plagues of flies. Fortunately when there was a breeze it generally blew towards the enemy, a fact which we could well appreciate whenever the evening whiff came our way. The most stringent sanitary measures alone could keep disease down, but in trying circumstances these were often overlooked. Reinforcements came who failed to realise the danger, and shortly the whole place was putrid with disease.

The thoughts of people were less on personal well-being, however, than on the job in hand. Everybody was needed at the moment, and all jeopardised their chances of recovery and stuck to their tasks. That the spirit was as strong as ever was shown at the most trying time of the summer by the magnificent feat of No. 4 detachment on the 12th of July, when in the "Worcester" trenches, under a concentrated fire from many enemy guns, they refused to "chuck it" although all the other guns in their neighbourhood had. Their emplacement was smashed (no fewer than six shells burst in it), several of the crew were knocked out, but the remainder kept up an accurate fire on their own allotted portion of the enemy front line, a few hundred yards away, until it was taken by the infantry, and then went on to the rest of the programme that had been given to them. This by a few lads, commanded by a sergeant who was himself a schoolboy, all more or less suffering from painful disease. So it went on. The rest might be at peace, but there was no peace for the people who had the ammunition and could get there. The guns had always to be carried, as the positions were impossible for ponies. Anyone who finds it difficult to realise the conditions can get something approaching them by trying to climb the side of a house with a sack of flour on his back whilst someone is pelting him with large bricks.

However, all good things come to an end, and those who were left at the end of July were much bucked at receiving from the Staff profuse expressions of regret at their impending departure from the command. The standing joke at Helles was that the 29th Division was going home! The optimists thought that this hoary chestnut was going to stand up for itself. Some hopes! Within a week, most of which was spent doing fatigues on the island of Imbros, they were at Suvla Bay enacting again the scenes of the last week of April. They landed with reduced detachments, which within a couple of days were reduced by 50 per cent. In one action No. 2 Gun's crew was reduced to one man, who continued to serve it alone, until two signallers came to his assistance. Our signallers were always ready to turn a hand to anything. The arch humorist of Flanders, Ian Hay, has been rather unkind to the R.A. Signaller. Those fellows of ours were as versatile as they were daring, and their professional skill was only equalled by their acquisitive ability.

The story of Suvla is well known. Raw troops and lack of discipline; disease, and then the blizzard. Still there was no rest for the screw guns. From Chocolate Hill to Jefferson's Post, on the plain or on the ridges, they were at it if anybody was. The band got smaller and smaller. Occasionally wounded came back from Egypt, but it was very few of the old lot who were left to make the last oddments in the "Iron Duke's" cargo of soup kitchens, ambulances, bicycles, guns, and details of troops. It was with very mixed feelings, too, that one looked back at that rugged Peninsula, where so many of our gallant mates were resting their last. It felt so much like deserting them, for it was not easy to think of them but as we knew them, full of life and eager to be in the thick of it.

Brought together again at Ismailia, where the Suez Canal enters the northernmost of the Bitter Lakes, we must have looked a weird assortment of human beings. Indeed, Sir Archibald Murray left us in no doubt as to that. Emaciated, haggard, weather beaten, attired in rags and ends of every possible variety of clothing, we might have been New Zealanders, Indians, or a native Labour Corps, as far as appearances went.

The anniversary of the Helles Landing saw the Battery heading for the desert on the march to Kantara. Few units could have done that march. Between forty and forty-five miles were covered, in full marching order, over heavy sand, through marshes, between three in the afternoon and eight the next morning. A cup of tea and two hours halt from two to four a.m. was all they had to refresh them. Another march to Romani followed, and from then on the Battery was continually on the move up and down the Corps front, which was indeed a weary land wherein was precious little water.

The Canal was being threatened by a large Turkish army.
Before the attack came, however, an urgent call came to go over into Macedonia and help the Mountain Batteries there, which were unable to maintain a working strength on account of the malarious nature of the country. We looked forward ever little to leaving at the time when the attack for which we had prepared so much appeared imminent, especially to go to a theatre which we understood to be stagnant as regards fighting and infested with disease. Our chagrin was increased when just before we embarked at Alexandria news came of the Turkish attack and the brilliant British victory at Romani, which was the beginning of the drive which wrested Palestine from the Turks. Re-equipment at Salonica occupied a few weeks; then a three days’ march brought us to our sector of the front. At dawn following our arrival we got a “reception” from an enemy field battery, which a week or two later we had the pleasure of destroying in a direct duel.

Our service with the Salonica Army continued until the Armistice. The work, it less showy than that on some of the other fronts, was certainly not less trying. Generally it was either lying in forward positions under the enemy’s guns, where one had to lie close all day, with nothing to look forward to but the next attack of fever, or a few 4.2’s from the ridge opposite in the evening, or climbing interminable mountains by the most execrable paths, to raids on enemy posts, with a company or two of infantry. Often many miles from supplies, exposed to all extremes of temperature and climatic conditions, prevented by a vagabond existence from preparing adequate shelter (for invariably it was another move as soon as the dugout was finished), and all suffering from some form of malaria, we were yet bound together by a powerful Clan spirit which made the name of the Battery a bye-word in the Salonica

Army for almost superhuman endurance and faultless behaviour in action. When “The Day” came, and the wall of the Belechitza Mountains was scaled and stormed and the Bulgars chased far into his own country, they were, as always, in the forefront, on one particular occasion even in front of the cavalry, and although the C.-in-C. has credited an English Yeomanry Regiment with the honour of being the first British troops to enter Bulgaria, it is very doubtful if the honour does not belong to the R.M.B. Certainly they were the first artillery, as they were in Gallipoli and Sinai. Unfortunately jealousy in high circles again came between them and the honours they so richly earned; but that is indeed a small point when weighed against the knowledge that every man has who has had any connection with the Battery, that every regiment that was ever associated with it, was avowedly proud of that Association.

THE BURGH OF STORNOWAY.

Population last Census, 3980: (Males, 1759; Females, 2221).

The Burgh of Stornoway contributed in no small degree to the magnificent record of the Island of Lewis as a whole, and we have had our full share of the sorrows as well as of the honours of war. Stornoway boys flocked to the colours from all quarters of the globe. In the land forces they fought on every front; on the sea, the old town was represented in every important battle and in many minor engagements and exploits.

Quite a number of our men were mobilised with the 3rd Battalions of the Seaforths, Camerons, and Gordons, and were sent to Flanders in the vanguard of the Expeditionary Force. The first of them to fall was Neil Smith, Keith Street, on 13th October, 1914. Three days later Donald Stewart, Bells Road, was killed, and in quick succession came news of the death of Malcolm Crockett, Bayhead; Malcolm Mackay, Newton, and Donald Kennedy, Keith Street. Of the gallant band of our Militia boys who were with the "Old Contemptibles" but few, alas, escaped with their lives. All honour to the men who first met and out-fought the Hun when he was immensely superior in numbers and munitions! Upwards of 70 town lads were mobilised with the Ross Mountain Battery, and interest in the attempt to force the Dardanelles was immeasurably heightened for the community when it became known that the Battery was detailed for service in the land operations there.

We were particularly proud of the fact that they were the only Territorial artillery unit selected to serve with the 29th Division in that desperate undertaking. How they took their baptism of fire with a gallantry unsurpassed by the seasoned troops with whom they co-operated, and how they played their part on the Peninsula, and in other theatres of the war, is described elsewhere in these pages by the graphic pen of Sergt. A. J. Macleod, of the Battery (afterwards Lieut., R.G.A.).

In New Zealand, Australia, Africa, the Argentine, Chili, as well as in Canada, the call of the Mother Country met with a ready response from Stornoway men. The spirit that animated these dauntless fellows may be symbolised by the case of Donald Macrae, New Street, who formed one of a little band of seven who travelled from Fort Nelson a thousand miles to Winnipeg in order to enlist. Two hundred and fifty miles of it was done on foot through swamps. They had rivers to cross and had to hire Indians to ferry them in their canoes. Often their clothes were frozen.

on them, and they had to stop to light a fire to thaw themselves. The officer who enrolled them at Winnipeg said he heard of their coming from Nelson, and wanted to get the bunch, as, said he, any man who came over the Nelson trail can come through anything. Unfortunately, like many another Lewis Colonial, Macrae found a hero's grave in France, where he died of wounds in July, 1916.

Altogether 116 Stornoway men gave their lives in the war, representing over 16 per cent. of the number serving. No less than 12 families suffered double losses, namely, that of the late Mr John Macfarlane, Inspetor of Poor; Mr James Mair, fishcurer; Mr Donald Macleod, 38 Point Street; Mr Murdo Stewart, Bells Road; Mrs Mackinnon, 8 Newton Street; the late Mr Alexander Stewart, cooper, Scotland Street: Mr Neil Murray, tailor, Church Street; the late Captain Macdonald, 37 Keith Street; Mr Alexander Smith, 2 Maciver's Buildings; the late Mr Donald Macleod, contractor, Keith Street; Mr Angus Murray, 6 Maciver's Buildings; and Mr George Macdonald, 52 Bayhead Street, who was himself on service, along with his six sons and two sons-in-law. One family, that of the late Mr Robert Nicolson, Plantation Road, lost three sons.

The list of war honours shows that Stornoway men and women distinguished themselves ashore and afloat. Sister M. B. Martin, Cromwell Street, and Sister Annie Buchanan, Marybank, were awarded the Royal Red Cross decoration. Sergt. Hector Mackenzie, Bells Road, won the D.C.M. with bar, and also received the Order of St Stanislaus from the Russian Government. The Croix de Guerre was awarded to Major Alfred L. Robertson, O.B.E., R.A.M.C., and Major J. N. Anderson, R.F.A. Captain Charles P. Anderson, R.F.A., won the Military Cross, as did also Lieut. Kenneth Maciver, R.F.A., and Lieut. Murdo Maclean, R.F.A. Captain Lawrence W. Bain, R.A.M.C., and his brother, Lieut. Angus A. Bain, were both awarded the Military Cross. Quite a number received the Military Medal. Sergt. Donald Macfarquhar, South African Expeditionary Force, was twice mentioned in despatches, and received the Belgian Medal Militaire. James Sutherland, 63 Bayhead, was awarded the Croix de Chevalier Legion of Honour, for his services as special guide to the Lake Nyassa Field Force. Lieut. Alex. M. Murray, R.E., received the Order of St Stanislaus for his services with the White Sea expedition. Of the sea awards the most notable was the Distinguished Service Cross awarded to Lieut. Alexander J. Mackenzie, R.N.V.R., commanding officer of the “Marguerite,” O. 154, for a successful fight with enemy submarines.

The lists for Stornoway which follow will be found arranged on the following plan:—Newton, James Street, South Beach, North Beach (including Point Street and the small cross streets), Cromwell Street, Bayhead; streets running East and West (commencing with Scotland Street), streets running North and South (commencing with Kenneth Street), ending with Matheson Road and the Castle Policies.

The Nicolson Institute.

In a war so great the share taken by the members of any one institution can be only as a grain of sand on the seashore. Yet the expression of loyal pride in local effort and achievement is not excluded, and has its use. It is, therefore, with pleasure that I have agreed to the request of the Editor of the Lewis Roll of Honour to write a few words on the relation of the Nicolson Institute (which draws its pupils from all parts of the Island) to the great war.

For a number of years it had been the practice for a considerable proportion of the older boys, during their attendance at the Secondary School, to put in their training with the local body of Territorials—the Ross Mountain Battery. At the School Prize Giving of 1911, these boys attended in uniform to be ready to go off the same evening by the steamer en route for the annual training camp. Before the school re-opened, the Territorial Force was mobilised, and for some of these lads there intervened four long years of toil, of fighting, and of sickness overseas, before they saw their homes again.

Of the schoolboys still on the roll of the school at midsummer, 1914, thirty-six went on service with the Ross Battery, and later a number of other pupils who had not belonged to the Battery volunteered.

A census taken during the training at Bedford gave 103 as the total number of Old Nicolsonians then in the Battery. These saw their first service overseas at Gallipoli, where as a unit of the 29th Division they took part in the first landing. The first British gun fired on the Peninsula was one of our mountain guns. While the gunners were doing fine work with the advanced infantry under the most severe conditions the drivers were engaged in the no less dangerous task of taking up food and ammunition to the firing line. All on the Peninsula in these days became habituated to living under fire. Even when bathing in the sea beneath the cliffs they were never out of gun range. For a portion of the Battery the no less rigorous days at Suvla followed. It was at Chocolate Hill that the “school gun” (as we regarded it) came under severe Turkish fire and two of the gun crew lost their lives.

Next followed the pleasant, though hard-working, interlude in Egypt. Then the two years in the Balkans brought their burden of toil and sickness, finishing in the great rush over the mountains into Bulgaria. One of our old boys who had transferred from the Battery to the air service was the first observer to bring back to Headquarters the news of the Bulgarian retreat. In the pursuit the Ross Mountain Battery was the first of the Allied artillery over the enemy's frontier. The hard drive over the hills with the guns unceasingly shelling the fleeing enemy, until the Armistice checked the pursuit, is for these men the last picture the War has left them of active service.

Meanwhile another detachment of the Battery was in Palestine sharing in the toilsome scramble over the craggy uplands and across the wadis of Canaan. These helped to inflict the final defeat which at length set the Holy Land free from the Turk's paralysing rule.

On other fronts, in the same way, the old schoolboys bore their share. The accompanying photograph of a group of nine Nicolsonians who, in the first half of 1915, went out to France in the 4th Gordons, gives a glimpse of the nature of the work there, and of the cost of it to the School. Of the nine soldiers here shown two were killed in action, six were wounded, some of them several times over, and the remaining one was on medical grounds returned to home service. Other regiments had their share of our recruits: a good many of our old boys saw the war through in the Seaforths, some in the Camerons, some in the Black Watch, and a number among the Canadians. No front has been without its quota—Flanders, Artois, Picardy, Champagne, Baku, Archangel, Egypt, Palestine, Mesopotamia, North-West India. On all the seas of the world also they have been afloat—as deckhands in minesweepers, as AB’s on scouts and patrol-boats, as naval schoolmasters, as surgeons, as commissioned officers. In the mercantile marine, too, those on the bridge or in the engine room have their own stories to tell of perilous escapes from mine and submarine.

Nor have the girls failed to take a share. In Women’s Army Auxiliary Corps and Women’s Royal Naval Service, as nurses, as munition workers, they have shown the same spirit of steady purpose and cheerful endurance, and have contributed in their own way to the final defeat of the enemy.

A goodly number of the boys have received recognition for the meritorious nature of their services: one has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, one the Distinguished Flying Cross, one the Cross of the Legion of Honour, five the Distinguished Conduct Medal, fifteen the Military Cross, three the Croix de Guerre, eleven the Military Medal, one the Meritorious Service Medal, one the Serbian Gold Medal, one the Greek Military Cross, one the Belgian Medaille Militaire, one the Order of St Stanislaw, and several others have been mentioned in despatches.

The School mourns her many dead. Of those who have been killed in action, have died of wounds, or whose deaths have been a result of the hardships of war, we have counted a hundred and one. Our sympathy goes out to the relatives who have lost their dear ones. The grief felt by the School for those who have gone is leavened with pride when we remember their devotion to duty, their appreciation of the great issues, their spirit of self-forgetfulness and of steady courage. Their example will remain to inspire their successors in the school with something of their spirit of brave endeavour and their recognition of the high purpose for which life is given.

LAXDALE SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Laxdale, Benside, Guershader, New Valley and Coulregrein.)

Population last Census, 826; (Males, 385; Females, 443).

The Laxdale district comprises the townships of Benside or New Market, Laxdale, New Valley, Guershader and Coulregrein. Prior to the war there was a fair number in the regular army, navy and militia, and before the cessation of hostilities practically every man of war age in the district had been enrolled. It was heartening to see that many of the young men who had emigrated to Australia, Canada and South America, returned—some to fight in the Colonial units and others to join the native Highland regiments.

The losses were heavy; in one week news came of four who had fallen, and with the exception of Laxdale, which is the smallest of the villages, every township has had to mourn the death of some of its youngest and most virile inhabitants.

A few suffered long imprisonment in Germany, and nearly all who had been in service for any length of time were wounded, but with one exception no one was unfortunate enough to lose a limb.

Private Graham, the Royal Engineers, son of Mr Murdo Graham, Laxdale, gained the Military Medal and C.S.M. Neil Shaw of the Canadian Machine Gun Corps was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal. This soldier was only in the early twenties at the end of the war, and it was very gratifying to hear of the grit of a lad of that age in such a responsible position. He is a son of Mr John Shaw, New Valley, five of whose family were on active service, two of whom were killed in France.

From this district, out of a total population of 226, there were 153 men who served, representing 40 per cent, of the male population. Of the total 65 were in Highland Regiments: 33 in the Royal Navy, R.N.R., and Mercantile Marine, while 27 came across with the Canadians.

The casualty list numbered 31, being 20 per cent, of those serving. The first to fall was John Robert Macleod, New Valley, on 6th November, 1914. Alex. Shaw, New Valley, fell on 11th November, and Thomas Stewart, Coulregrein, two days later.

They all did their duty, and perhaps the best epitaph we can devise to the memory of those whose fate it was never to return is to remember the words of the soldier son of Mr Norman Macleod, Benside, who in writing home to comfort his parents on the death of a younger brother in France, said "He has died a good death." They have all died good deaths, and alas! it was decreed that the writer himself should fall in action on the plains of Mesopotamia.

A Gallant Officer.

Lieut. GEORGE THOMSON, M.C., Worcestershire Regiment.
(Son of Mr Alexander Thomson, F.C. Elder, 32 Tong).

The following is the official memorandum of the award to him of the Military Cross:—"He was wounded early in the attack, but receiving first aid rejoined his platoon and re-organised it under heavy fire. He only withdrew on being wounded a second time." (The latter wound was a serious bullet wound in the chest; the earlier wounds were in the head and arm.)
NOW that the Great War is over, the records of this district give cause for feelings of sadness and pride—sadness for the death on service of twenty-one young men, and pride that they gave their lives for the cause of freedom and that so many as eight war honours were gained by village lads.

When it is mentioned that the total population in the district in 1914 was 500, and the total male population 230, the above numbers, to give their lives and to gain honours, are very striking.

The heaviest casualties took place early in the war among the Militia boys and members of the R.N.R., and, strange to relate, the wreck of H.M.S. "Iolaire," which brought so much suffering to the Island of Lewis, was not responsible for any loss of life in this district, although four young men came on leave that same night, crossing by the s.s. "Sheila."

The following made the supreme sacrifice:—Malcolm Macdonald (Donald),
3 Tong; Evander Maciver, 3 Tong;
Norman Macinnes, Q.M.S., 6 Tong (died in Stobhill Hospital); Malcolm Macleod
(Angus), 8 Tong; Donald Macleod
(Angus), 8 Tong; Malcolm Murray, 10
Tong; Murdo Macleod (Kenneth sen.),
12 Tong; Angus Macleod (Peter), 12
Tong; Malcolm Finlayson, 14 Tong (died at Bombay); John Thomson, 32 Tong; John Macdonald, 6
Aird of Tong; Samuel Macdonald, 8 Aird of Tong; Donald Macdonald, 8 Aird of Tong; Norman Macfarlane, 9 Aird of Tong (Died at Quebec); Donald Finlayson, 19 Aird of Tong; John Smith, 20 Aird of Tong; Duncan Smith, 20 Aird of Tong; Donald Macmillan, 21 Aird of Tong; John Macmillan, 21 Aird of Tong; Angus Macled (George),
21 Aird of Tong; John Macleod, 25 Aird of Tong.

Honours were awarded to—

The Highland Brigade at Buzancy.

The following graphic description of the taking of Buzancy by the Highland Brigade, from the pen of Lieut. Alex. Thomson, M.A., D.C.M., M.C., appeared in the "Stornoway Gazette" of 6th September, 1918:

We had been moved by slow stages from the flat, uninteresting plains of Flanders, where the Scarpe flowed on in its placid way along smooth grassy banks; through the smiling, fertile lands of the Southern Somme; past the wooded hilltops of Campaign, to where the Marne and the Oise flowed into smiling valleys and among fertile cornfields. The morning of July 28th found us holding a front position in one of the thick woods which overlooked Buzancy — thick, treacherous woods, where we knew the stealthy enemy machine gunners lay and watched. Aeroplanes circled overhead, puffs of white smoke around them where the enemy's "archies" burst, artillery well hidden among the trees occasionally boomed — all was quiet and peaceful.

At 12 noon we crept stealthily and silently forward to our assembly positions, and waited grimly for the end of the period that was to elapse before the artillery and machine guns dropped their curtain fire and enabled us to go forward to the assault. It seemed an eternity as I stood with watch in hand beside Captain Macmillan, who commanded the company I was with. I was glad I was with him, for I have no doubt he is one of our coming Lewis heroes — he follows the lead so nobly set him by David Macleod and John N. Macrae, and if his military career lasts much longer Lewis will be proud of yet another Seaforth officer.

With ten minutes to go we were both silent — our minds were far away with our loved ones among our Highland hills; home scenes passed in a panoramic flash before us, and from the bottom of our hearts we prayed that all would be well.

He had just given the order to his men to get ready, and with the words "God speed you," the barrage fell. It seemed as if the heavens had opened to a rolling thunder all along the line. Shells burst in their hundreds of thousands on the village and chateau grounds. Machine guns rattled like the veriest hailstorm, and the attack was launched. The boys advanced as if they were on the parade ground at Cromarty, the enemy machine guns took their toll of the Seaforths as they advanced through a field of standing corn, but never a wavering — the broken gaps were quickly filled, the line went forward to the chateau walls and entered the Unknown, behind which lurked — who could tell?

I never saw anything like the advance of the Seaforths that day. Through the thick woods surrounding the chateau they advanced, and nothing could stop them. On, on, ever forward they went—every minute the ranks getting thinner as the Germans got our range, but the boys never faltered until they had carried the village and consolidated on a ridge beyond it. The Germans could not stand the dash of our men, nor the intensity of our artillery barrage—they huddled in cellars or whatever shelter they could get. In one case a small party of our men captured 100 prisoners, including two officers. The enemy machine gunners were, however, very brave, and stuck to their guns to the very last— even after the situation for them was perfectly hopeless.

The Gordons on our left and the Black Watch on our right had, if anything, a more difficult job to do, for they had to advance through standing corn which gave no cover, but these gallant fellows went forward dauntlessly, suffering a murderous fire but never flinching until they conformed to us and we held an unbroken front to the enemy. Buzancy, the key to the whole situation, was ours; the Highland Brigade had enhanced the reputation it won under Hector Macdonald on the veldts of Africa, the kilts fluttered in the breeze beyond the small French village we had stormed and won, and another glorious page was added to the history of the brave Highlanders.

Our General told us it was an attack which in the earlier days of the war would have become historic, but now would just mean one part of the stupendous counter-stroke on the Marne. Two days later the enemy were in full retreat, but we were too tired to chase him further than nine kilometres, and we were relieved.

This village is miles away from the whirlpool of war. The old peasants come ambling home from their field, the cows walk lazily from pasture, and the peasant girls go peacefully to the milking. The sun is setting and I sit and smoke on the garden seat in the shade. Home seems very, very near— I can almost fancy I hear the waves thundering against the rocks. And—who knows? Perhaps nearer than we expect the dove of peace is on the wing, the laurel wreath of victory is coming to us and to our brave Allies. Who knows? Who knows? ——.
Lieut. A. B MACRAE, R.N.R., D.S.C., with Bar.

Born at Back 13th August, 1884, Lieut. Macrae went to sea before the mast in 1902, and had been sailing as Chief Officer in the service of the Federal Company for over three years when war broke out. He volunteered, got a commission in the R.N.R. in November, and joined H.M.S. "Coquette" as 1st Lieut. in December, 1914. On 7th March, 1916, the "Coquette" was blown up, the Captain and 22 men being lost. In April, 1916, Lieut. Macrae got command of T.B. 112 and rendered valuable services in preventing submarine attacks on a convoy in August, 1917, for which he received a letter from the Admiralty expressing their appreciation of his action. Later the same year (24th September), he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for destruction of an enemy submarine, and in the following month he was awarded a Bar to the D.S.C. for a similar action. On 12th January, 1919, he left the "Osprey" on being demobilised at his own request.
BACK SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Back, Vatisker, Lighthill and Coll.)

Population last Census, 1443: (Males, 668; Females, 775).

When the great call came in August, 1914, with startling suddenness, most of the men in the district were on the East Coast pursuing their usual vocation. Promptly the call was answered, the men in the R.N.R. and the lads in the Militia making their way to their respective depots, without getting the chance to cross the Minch to bid farewell to their loved ones at home—homes which, alas! many were never destined again to see.

At last census the population of the district was returned as 1443—668 males and 775 females. The total number who joined up was 331—23 per cent. of the total population and almost 50 per cent. of the males. The number who were killed in battle, drowned at sea, or who died as the result of wounds received or disease contracted abroad was 50—13 per cent. of the total serving.

Three families sustained double losses, viz., John Macrae, 25 Coll, who had three sons serving and lost two; Murdo Macaskill, Lighthill, who lost his only son; and the Beaton family in Coll, who lost two brothers.

Looking back on the past four years, what impressed one most was the crowds which daily wended their way to the Post Office to read the daily bulletins of the war posted up there. A look at the faces of those reading soon told whether the news therein was good or bad. While most at the beginning of the war were optimistic, a feeling of pessimism began to pervade all as the years passed and there was no sign of the foe being beaten. Everyone heaved a sigh of relief when the Armistice was declared and there was general rejoicing, which, however, a few weeks later was turned into universal mourning when the news of the "Iolaire" disaster became known. It is impossible to picture what followed this awful disaster or to enter into the feelings of those whose cup of joy was so ruthlessly dashed from their lips.

While we still mourn with those who mourn we must also rejoice with those who do rejoice over the meritorious service rendered by all serving, and especially with those whose deeds brought them the rewards of valour. Lieutenant A. Macrae, Vatisker, did yeoman service in hunting down submarines, and for sinking two received the D.S.C. and bar. He was Lieutenant in command of the "Osprey" at the time, his first T.B.D., the "Coquette," having the misfortune to strike a mine. Three received the Military Medal, viz., Lance-Corporal Alex. Graham, 8 Back; John Graham, 31 Back; and Murdo Murray, 52 Back. Two received the D.C.M., viz., Neil Maciver and Alex. Maciver, both of the Canadians and both natives of Coll who emigrated to Canada several years ago.

Lieut. Murdo Maciver, R.N.

Lieut. Maciver is a son of the late Mr. Angus Maciver, 25 North Tolsta, Stornoway. He served for some time as a pupil-teacher in Tolsta Public School. In 1892, at the age of seventeen, he enlisted in the Royal Navy. Fourteen years ago he was promoted to the rank of Warrant Officer. In 1907 he was one of the four champion gunners of the Mediterranean Squadron. At the outbreak of war he was second in command on Torpedo Boat No. 115, and afterwards of a Submarine.
THERE is a general impression amongst strangers that it was because the men of Lewis had, prior to the war, been in either the Royal Naval Reserve or the Militia, that so many of them answered the call of King and Country. But from August to December, 1914, in spite of the large number of her men already on active service, Lewis contributed as liberally as any other part of the British Isles. By nature reticent and not ready to proclaim his patriotism on the house-tops, the Lewisman can be depended on to do his duty in his country's hour of need. When the call came to him he did not hesitate, but at once loyally responded. The district of North Tolsta did magnificently. The population at last Census was 853—400 males and 453 females. The number of men on active service was 231, equivalent to 27 per cent. of the total and 58 per cent. of the males. This record is hard to beat—even in Loyal Lewis.

One hundred and twenty-seven men were called up by mobilisation. Since the beginning of the war no fewer than 104 men enlisted either in the Army or in the Navy. Over 75 per cent. of them had voluntarily enlisted before the Military Act was introduced. Fifty-two enlisted before the end of 1914, twenty-three others joined in 1915, and twenty-nine in the years 1916, 1917, and 1918. This village had responded so well by the end of 1916 that supposing the military age had been then raised to 45 no additional man could have been obtained. The hamlet of Glen Tolsta with a population of 40, had ten men on active service, and of these seven enlisted between August and December, 1914.

A large number of young men joined before they reached military age, as well as many others who were over 50 years of age. A lad of sixteen whose father was in the army enlisted on hearing of the death of his eldest brother in France. Another man holding an important appointment in the South, when he heard of the death of his youngest brother, at once enlisted in his brother's battalion to fill up the gap. A lad of sixteen who was in the Militia at the outbreak of the war told his father that there was no use trying to get him out of the army. "For," said he, "I am determined to go to the front." To the front he went and there he was wounded before he was 17, and killed at the age of 18. Another man who had spent many years in Canada enlisted in the Trawler Section of the Royal Naval Reserve although he was then 60 years of age. Several men travelled at their own expense from Western Canada to join the Royal Naval Reserve. A sailor, who had gone through the South African War, offered himself at the beginning of the war although he was then about 50 years of age. This man took part in the retreat from Mons and during the war was four times wounded in action. Many other outstanding cases could be given.

The following particulars show the response made by

*Sergt. Donald Macleod, 12 North Tolsta; killed 16th May, 1915.

*Corpl. Angus Macleod, 56 North Tolsta; killed 19th June, 1915.

*Murdo Graham, 24th North Tolsta; killed 17th October, 1914.

*John Nicolson, 9 North Tolsta; died of wounds, 28th February, 1915.
several families in this district: —Mrs John Campbell, No. 54, seven sons. Mr Kenneth Campbell, No. 2, six sons and a son-in-law. Mr. Alex. Maciver, No. 25, five sons. Mr Kenneth Macleod, No. 56, five sons and three grandsons. Mrs N. Macleod, No. 6, three sons, four sons-in-law and two brothers. Mrs Macleod, No. 20, her husband, three stepsons, and four brothers. Mr Murdo Mackay, No. 42, three sons, two brothers and a brother-in-law. Mr Angus Macleod, No. 54, three sons and three sons-in-law. Mrs D. Smith, No. 56, her husband, three sons and five brothers. Mrs D. Macleod, No. 56, her husband, four brothers and four brothers-in-law. Mr J. Murray, No. 45, four sons and a son-in-law. Mr M. Macmillan, Glen, four sons, two brothers and a son-in-law. Mr D. MacKenzie, No. 73, three sons, two grandsons and a son-in-law. Mr D. Macdonald, No. 48, three sons and three sons-in-law. Widow Murray, No. 4, three sons, three grandsons and two sons-in-law. Widow Murray, No. 49, two sons, five grandsons and a son-in-law. Widow A. Smith, No. 24, two sons, four grandsons, a son-in-law; and last, but not least, Mrs John Campbell, (jun.), No. 54, who had her husband, six brothers and six brothers-in-law serving. The last mentioned case is probably a record one. There are many others who have given several sons and near relatives, but want of space prevents further details. But the parents who have given their only sons have given their all just as well as those who have given several. They have all done what they could, and posterity will bless them for their noble sacrifice.

If Tolsta has responded nobly she has suffered severely. Fifty of her sons have made the supreme sacrifice—27 belonging to the Royal Naval Reserve and 23 belonging to the various branches of the Army. This is equivalent to 21.6 per cent. of those serving. Of the sixteen Tolsta men on H.M.S. "Iolaire" on her ill-starred trip only five were saved.

Who can describe the poignancy of that disaster! These 50 men have left 19 widows, 54 fatherless children, and over 150 other dependants.

Widow John Campbell, No. 54, lost three of her seven sons. Mr K. Macleod, No. 56, lost three of his five sons. Mr Malcolm Macleod, No. 58, lost two sons and two nephews. Mr A. Murray, No. 49 (now residing in Stornoway), lost two sons. Widow Colin Campbell, No. 47, lost her husband and eldest son. Widow J. Macdonald, No. 12, lost her husband and only brother. Widow J. Martin, No. 76, lost her only son, two sons-in-law and three nephews. Mr Donald Macleod, Hill Street, and Mr Kenneth Morrison, No. 8, have lost their only sons. Widow A. Murray, No. 49, lost three grandsons.

From this district there came: —A Lieut.-Commander, two Warrant Officers, three Petty Officers, a Chaplain with U.S. Army, a Second-Lieutenant, and several Sergeants; also a Chief Carpenter. Three Tolsta soldiers have won the Military Medal for bravery on the field, and one of the three was awarded the Croix de Guerre. A large number of men have received the 1914 Star.

It is worthy of note here that Widow J. Campbell, No. 54, whose seven sons were on active service at the beginning of hostilities, received in December, 1914, a special letter of congratulation from His Majesty the King.

North Tolsta, like the other parts of the Empire, has reason to be proud of her sons at home and abroad. Happy is the nation whose people, are so steadfast and loyal when such a testing time comes.

"Rinn easairdean trenbhach bhur feuchainn gu cruaidh
Ach phill sibh gu leir iad, 's cha d'gheill 's cha do ghluais,
Ch'ollich 'ur crathadh ri carraig 's a' chunan
A chumas buan charraid ri slachdraidh nan stiuaidh."

DUNCAN MACDONALD.

A Lewisman's Service in London.

Lieut. Martin has been a prominent figure in Highland circles in London for many years, and no one has done more for recruiting in the Metropolis. In the old days in Stornoway he was a gunner in the 1st Ross Artillery Volunteers, and for twenty years (1892-1912) he acted as recruiting sergeant for the London Scottish. During the war period he devoted all his energies to work in the national service. For three years (1914-17) he was recruiting officer for his old regiment, and to him belongs the honour of raising the 2nd and 3rd Batt. of the London Scottish as well as the London Contingent sent to the Highland Brigade at Bedford.

Lieut. Martin came into prominence through a dispute with War Office officials over the raising of extra battalions for the Territorial Army, which ended in his complete vindication, the War Office being compelled to admit that he was in the right.

The affair had the publicity of a discussion in the House of Commons in April, 1917. In the course of the debate the Under Secretary for War (Mr Macpherson) paid a very high tribute to Lieut. Martin, who, he said, was "one of the best men the country had produced, and in his special capacity unequalled by any officer in the Army at home. He had excelled in organisation and did wonders in recruiting, and his retirement was a great loss to the Army." To Lieutenant Martin's determination is very largely due the fact that the Territorial Battalions were sent to France many months before Kitchener's Army was moved. The Territorial 2nd Battalions and the drafts sent from them to the 1st Battalions were months ahead of the New Army in training and soldierly qualities.

But his war service did not confine itself to recruiting. He worked out a system of checking supplies, etc., which put his Battalion at the top of the list as far as Quartermaster's work was concerned. For efficiency and economy Lieutent Martin's unit took first place in the London district, which itself was first among all the Home units.

Excellent as was his Army work, however, it was second in importance to his task at the Ministry of Shipping, where during 1917-18 he was chief assistant to Sir Norman Leslie in organising and directing the convoy system.

Lewis Boys in Holland.*

The heavy bags of mails that constantly pass into Germany via Holland testify how deep is our sympathy for the unfortunates who are imprisoned in an enemy's country—and they cannot have too much of our sympathy.

But let us not forget our boys who are prisoners in Holland—prisoners in a very real and pitiable sense. Do not exaggerate the effects of neutrality in their case. There are regrettable factors in their imprisonment which no neutrality, however benevolent, can relieve. They are all young men—game cocks—who meant to fight for their country as heroically as did their brothers of the "Carmania" and the "Orama."

He is a superficial enquirer who only asks, "Have they got enough to eat?" No doubt food is a first requisite, and in their case the food is coarse in quality; and the scarcity would be serious if the food were more appetising. But the most trying element in their condition is the feeling that one is a prisoner. This feeling is impressed on one's spirit in so many different ways—the click of the lock behind one when one enters—the sense that one is watched, and watched, too, under the muzzle of loaded rifles—the high walls around one of wire barbed and knotted—get on one's nerves. Between us and the main road stands the Groningen State prison, with broad shoulders, with small eyes and high cheek bones, frowning down upon our grounds, and reminding any boy that might be naughty that there are darker cells within.

No doubt their confinement is less stringent now than at the beginning. For now an agreement has been entered into with the Dutch Government, which has rendered needless all attempts to escape. At the beginning such attempts were determined and often amusing. One or two examples will suffice for illustration.

One day there was a great roll of matting to be carried out to the town. It was carried out on a pole between two sailors. The watch readily opened the gate. The two men, smoking their cigarettes, managed to swing through without betraying the unusual weight of the matting. No sooner were they at a safe distance than they dropped the roll, when a third sailor crept out and got safely away to Flushing, and thence to England.

On another occasion two men, having by some adventure escaped from the camp, found that the railway stations were by this time so well guarded that it was hopeless for an English tongue to attempt getting through to the train. The trick they fell upon raised many a laugh even among the Dutch who were the victims. The two men crossed the country eastward for about twenty miles, and entered a small town on the German frontier. Here they called upon the "Burgomaster" in a state of great excitement and perspiration, and told him they had just escaped from Germany, and would he be good enough to give them a pass to travel by train to Flushing? This the good man readily gave them, and they travelled in

LEWIS BOYS IN HOLLAND.

...great glee safe to the homeland! But this is all by the way, to show the eagerness of young men to escape into the free and exciting life of our tumultuous world.

Can our Lewis reader imagine any other set of juveniles on earth more unfitted for a life of confinement than Highlanders—boys from the mountains and the sea, young fellows brought up among sea-birds under the Atlantic breakers? Holland is so true to the origin of its name—"hollow-land"—and a Highlander is always looking for some hill to climb above the level of stagnant canals. Did I not see the far-off looks and the shadow of far-off crags in the blue of their thoughtful eyes!

I think there is nothing that brings out the basic factors of the individual human character as does a long period of imprisonment. And to be brief, I think I have some right, as a chaplain who has worked among our Lewis boys for about seven months, to testify something of their character under those testing and sifting trials. I do not care if this were read to the fourteen hundred Englishmen in our camp. I must record the fact that the Lewismen, with perhaps rare exceptions, were an example to all in showing forth in their daily conduct—and in particular on the Lord's Day—the fear and recognition of God. I had fellow-helper—very dear and sincere and zealous witnesses for Christ—among the English, whom I shall ever remember. But the main support of religion—at least in the outward tokens of God's claims upon man's obedience—was found among those Islanders. For example, the Sabbath Day was observed, not in any Pharasaic punctiliousness, but as in a very real sense a Day of God.

Our interned Islanders in Holland are neither sanctimonious saints nor male angels. They have their fun, their jokes, their pipe music. But let me say very emphatically that in morality, and as worshippers of the true God, and in all-round manliness, we may proudly compare them with any section of the British Navy. Commodore Henderson has had occasion repeatedly to congratulate Lewismen on distinctions won at examinations, and I wish some students of our Universities could have a peep at them poring over their books surrounded by shouts and laughter and songs, the wrestling and thumping that goes on continually in those huts.

I have not made this more painful reading by dwelling too much on the miserable monotony and deprivations in their life. Let readers who are possessed with imagination do what they can to alleviate the tedium of the time of their imprisonment by such tangible tokens of their sympathy as they have already more than once received from Lewis. Death has, alas! visited us here more than once; and the death-beds of John Smith and John Macleay will always be a sacred memory with those who have witnessed them.

If I were allowed to coin a word to characterise the general disease in our interned life in Holland, that word would be—monotonitis!

A MIGHTY HUNTER.

Captain Sutherland was awarded the Legion d'Honneur, Croix de Chevalier, for conspicuously good service as Special Guide to the Nyasaland Field Force. Captain Sutherland, who is a son of the late Mr James Sutherland, fishcurer, Lewis Street, Stornoway, is admittedly the world's mightiest elephant hunter. The thrilling tales he has to tell of his encounters with the mammoths of the African forest are related in his fascinating book, "Adventures of an Elephant Hunter" (published in 1912). At the time this book was written Mr. Sutherland had killed 447 bull elephants (he takes no account of cows). When war broke out he was hunting in German East Africa, and the Huns tried to keep him prisoner, but he eluded them by making a detour of 500 miles, getting out of enemy territory through Portuguese East Africa, and on to Fort Johnston, in Nyasaland. He was engaged by the Governor of that colony as Intelligence Officer. In June, 1915, he was severely wounded—a German sniper getting him with an explosive bullet in the abdomen. When the conquest of German East Africa was decided upon by the Government, he was made Chief Intelligence Officer and Provost Marshall on the staff of Brigadier-General Northey, with the rank of Lieutenant. He was promoted Captain in 1916 and was mentioned several times in despatches for his services in the field.

PARISH OF BARVAS.
THE hour of testing came and our men were ready. I mean the men of Lewis whom I knew and know. Meanwhile I have before my notice men included in the Lionel School Area, of whom I shall attempt a short sketch.

In that first week in August, 1914, many of our men and lads were engaged at the East Coast fishings, where they heard and answered the call of their country. Many of them left for home to receive their mobilisation instructions, arriving in Stornoway on Saturday, 8th August. There being no conveyances available, the men lost not a moment but set out and walked across the moor to their homes, a distance of over twenty miles. After snatching a few hours much needed rest, those who were attached to the Army Special Reserve embarked next morning (Sunday) on board the drifter “Fraserburgh,” of Hull, whose skipper kindly volunteered to take the men to Stornoway. From there they left for their several destinations. Alas, how very few of that stalwart band returned! From the Lionel School area 390 answered the call and served in all the branches of the Service. Of these 91 made the supreme sacrifice. Military Medals awarded, 4; D.S.M., 1; D.C.M., 1; M.C., 1; Russian Cross of the Order of St George, 1; Silver Medal of the Royal Humane Society, 1; and many 1914 Stars; officers, 2 (Lieuts.)

It was certainly cheering for the friends to see the lads depart in such high spirits, and week after week letters were received from all over the world telling of their coming home to take part in the struggle. One young lad wrote banteringly to his mother, “We are en route; expect me home when we settle the Germans.” Another lad wrote, “We embark to-morrow. I am pleased and proud to come and strike a blow for the dear old country.” Such is the spirit in which our lads answered the call to arms.

The tension during these years was somewhat allayed in this district by a daily official telegram which was received at Port of Ness P.O., and hung up for the public to read. Large numbers waited daily for that telegram and went to their homes joyful or otherwise, but always hopeful of final victory. No wonder the 11th November, 1918, is a day to be remembered. The signing of the Armistice brought tears of joy and outbursts of thankfulness, and little we then thought that we had yet to suffer the most crushing event of the war—the wreck of H.M.Y. “Tolair” on New Year’s morning, 1919. We were for a time unable to comprehend its vastness, but we now know that we still stagger under that overwhelming crash. Words are inadequate to describe our feelings. The Lionel School area lost 17 gallant seamen. Many of them were coming home discharged, and we and they predicted a bright future, but such is the irony of fate. John F. Macleod from this district is the lad who swam ashore with a line and succeeded in securing the hawser which was attached to it, so that many lives were saved; indeed, almost all who were saved owe their lives to the heroic efforts of this young man. Donald Morrison, also from this district, was the last survivor of the “Tolair.” For eight hours he clung to the mast until rescued next morning, exhausted, but able to assist himself down the mast and into the small boat that took him off his perilous position.

CROSS SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(South Dell, North Dell, Cross and Swanibost.)

(Population last Census, 1146; Males, 521; Females, 625.)

When the War broke out the natives of Cross District, both in the home townships and from the most distant parts of the world, answered bravely to the call. They came from Australia and South Africa, from New Zealand and from the far North West of Canada. They were found on every British front in Europe, Asia, or Africa. A large number served on two or more different fronts in France and Mesopotamia, in the Dardanelles, Egypt and Salonika, in France and Italy. Several had almost miraculous escapes, as a perusal of the Roll will show; some were wounded many times and are still alive and well; a few went through it all without a scratch.

We meet these survivors daily. They have "done their bit"—and a right brave and noble "bit" it was in the case of many—lads and men who have been through the very hottest of the fighting: who had fallen into, and made their escape from, the hands of the Hun; who had been picked up from the water after their ships had been torpedoed; or who had survived the "Iolaire" disaster. We can hardly imagine, as we see them going about their daily occupations, that they lately came from scenes so terrible. Who shall ever forget that it was through these and such as these, and the comrades they left, alas, "on the other side," that to-day we still breathe the breath of freedom.

Schoolhouse, Cross.

The record of Cross District is a proud one and a sad one—so many fought for the Cause; so many died for it.

The 247 men serving from the district was drawn from the different townships as follows:—Swanibost, 36 Navy, 37 Army; Cross, 24 Navy, 23 Army; North Dell, 10 Navy, 23 Army; South Dell and Aird Dell, 47 Navy, 47 Army; showing percentages of 47 of the male population and 21.4 of the total population.

The number of lives lost were as follows:—Swanibost, 7 Navy, 6 Army; Cross, 3 Navy, 4 Army; North Dell, 6 Army; South Dell and Aird Dell, 9 Navy, 18 Army—a total of 53.

There were five cases of double bereavement. Mr Donald Mackay, 20 Cross, lost two sons—Angus and William—in Mesopotamia in 1916. Donald and Murdo Macdonald, sons of Mr John Macdonald, 13 Swanibost, perished together in the ill-fated "Iolaire." That great disaster also claimed Malcolm Macleod, 28 Swanibost, whose brother, Sergt. John Macleod, Seaforths, was killed in France, March, 1918. On 9th May, 1915, Murray Murray, 5 South Dell, fell in France, and his brother Donald Murray, was killed 13th October, 1916. Roderick and John Murray, 27 South Dell, both died of wounds. Three men from 19 South Dell were drowned—Alexander, Finlay, and Angus Morrison.

AIRIDHANTUIM SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Lower Shader, Upper Shader, Ballantrushal, Borne and Mid-Borve.)

Population last Census, 1153 (Males, 530: Females, 623).

This District embraces the scattered villages of Ballantrushal, Upper and Lower Shader, Borne and Mid-Borve. The advent of the Great War in August, 1914, summoned the men of these villages to take their stand in the Empire's defence, and they all loyally responded. Young and old were to be seen in the throng—men who had seen active service in many parts of the world, and mere striplings who had hardly ever heard the shot of a gun in their lives before.

Close upon 200 men from the district were at the post of duty by the end of the first week, and the number steadily increased as the days and weeks went by. Many "went down to the sea in ships," but the greater part by far were militiamen, and their lot was cast amidst the greater scenes of horror and destruction on the bloody fields of France and Flanders. Before the end of August many of the brave lads had taken their part in helping to stem the onrush of the Hun, and in this connection it may be interesting to note that Roderick Macleay, 14 Ballantrushal, was among the first draft of the infantry that crossed to France. Draft after draft followed, each containing its quota of the district's lads, until, by the end of September, all who were of military age found themselves in the trenches.

There were several instances, however, in which the soldier was only about 16 years of age. One interesting case may be quoted. John Macdonald, 6 Mid Borne, joined the Militia while still of school age; in fact, he was only about 13 years old. He was called up at the outbreak of war and sent to France when he was just 15. He stoutly and persistently refused to be recalled home as being under age, and in due time he was promoted to the rank of Sergeant and awarded the Military Medal, the due reward of so brave a soldier.

The old folk left at home, who had, naturally, at first been thrown into confusion, began now to take a keen interest in the various phases of the war. The glorious and memorable action off Trinidad between the "Carmania" and the "Cap Trafalgar" first brought home in a real sense the fact that we were at war with an enemy as cruel and remorseless as ever drew the sword, for among the casualties on that occasion was Donald Macleay, 14 Upper Shader, a man with many years in the Naval Reserve to his credit. He was so grievously wounded that both his right arm and right leg had to be amputated. His life was for long despaired of, and his recovery has been a marvel to the surgeons and nurses who tended him in his illness.

The first man to fall in battle was Lance-Corpl. Charles Macleod, Gordon Highlanders, son of Mr John Macleod, 11
Ballantrushal, who fell at Ypres on the 11th October, 1914, at the age of 19. He was a lad who typified in a wonderful degree the extraordinarily fine characteristics that distinguish the British soldier. He was so strong, so brave, so fearless, and withal so modest. The sacrifice of his beautiful life in defence of his King and country, and of the old folk at home, created a deep and abiding impression.

Those left, however, continued to fight with magnificent dash and valour, and this was exemplified by the award to them of numerous war decorations. In addition to quite an exceptional number of 1914 Stars, the district can boast of one D.C.M., awarded to Corpl. Norman Mackenzie, Seaforths, 10 Mid-Borve; a D.S.M. to Alexander Macdonald, R.N.R., 1 Park, Borve; a Meritorious Service Medal to Sergt.-Major John Maclean, Seaforths, 5 Ballantrushal, and Military Medals to Corpl. John Macdonald, Camerons, 22 Ballantrushal; Norman Macleay, Canadians, 10 Ballantrushal; Wm. Smith, Gordons, 29 Lower Shader; Sergt. John Macdonald, Gordons, 6 Mid Borve; and to the late Sergt.-Major Alexander Smith, Seaforths, 15 Ballantrushal, and the late Sergt. Malcolm Mackenzie, Camerons, 1 Mid Borve. Two men from the district held commissions in the R.F.A., while another was a Lieutenant and Quartermaster in the Seaforths. Still another, the Rev. Dr. Isaac Macdonald, was a chaplain to the Canadians with the rank of Captain.

When all the families in the district did so well it would perhaps be invidious to make mention of individual households. There are one or two outstanding cases, however, worthy of note. Of the family of the late Mr. John Martin, 33 Lower Shader, six sons took their share in the Empire's defence, and one of them died on service in December, 1918. Five sons of Mr. Murdo Smith, 29 Lower Shader, responded to the call, and two of them made the supreme sacrifice in France, while another was seriously wounded and awarded the Military Medal. Of those of our lads who had the misfortune to fall as prisoners into the hands of the Huns little can be said save that they were treated with the same system of wanton brutality as was usually the lot of those in their position. They themselves are rather reticent about their experiences, but their emaciated bodies tell the tale.

Three men from the district who formed part of the Naval Brigade sent to the relief of Antwerp in 1914 were captured during the retreat, while several others had the same misfortune in France during the following years.

Alas! that with this splendid record of military glory and enterprise, the toll of life from this district has been exceedingly heavy. In every theatre in which the forces of Britain were engaged in the conflict many of our boys bravely scaled "the toppling crags of duty," only to meet on the top the shadow that sits and waits for all. And all the seven seas increased the toll. Of 52 men on service from Ballantrushal, 15 (or 29 per cent.) gave their lives. 58 men from Upper Shader were on service, and 12 (or 21 per cent.) laid down their lives. 71 men from Lower Shader were engaged, and 17 (or 24 per cent.) made the supreme sacrifice. Of 55 men from Borve, 16 (or 25 per cent.) did not return. In the case of Mid Borve, 18 men were on service, and three fell in France, making a percentage of 17. Four families in Ballantrushal each lost two sons. In Lower Shader there were also four similar cases. In Borve there were three families which each gave two sons.

With the cessation of hostilities in November, people breathed a sigh of relief. No more would the cold official notice conveying the details of the death of someone near and dear come to the district. Already the Borve and Shader losses had been distressingly heavy, but the blow dealt by the loss of the "Jolinaire" on the black and never-to-be-forgotten morning of January 1st put all the previous losses in the shade. The utter prostration and stupefaction that benumbed people on this occasion was incredible. From the Airdhantuim district six men perished that night. Peculiarly pathetic and worthy of special mention was the death of Gunner Malcolm Matheson, R.N.R.T., 10 Upper Shader. As a special reservist in the Seaforth Highlanders he was called to the colours on the outbreak of war, and sent to France towards the end of 1914. There he fought valiantly through all the hot battles of 1915, and, for his gallant conduct at Ypres, was mentioned in Sir John French's despatches. Towards the end of 1915, he was transferred to Mesopotamia, where he suffered all the horrors incidental to that dread climate. In 1916 he was seriously wounded—so seriously that he was temporarily discharged. Anxious to do his bit again, he re-enlisted in the Trawler Section of the R.N.R., and after successfully passing through a course of gunnery at Chatham, was sent to sea as a Gunner on H.M. Trawler "Iceland." Here once again he gave a good account of himself. While patrolling in the North Sea one day, two German Zeppelins were observed making for the English Coast. Matheson at once engaged them, and after a protracted fight eventually succeeded in bringing them both down, whereupon their crews were made prisoners. The fact that he perished within a few yards of his beloved Island made the circumstances of his death all the more poignant. But he died as indeed he lived, faithful and loyal—one of Nature's gentlemen.

Let us always hold in the deepest veneration and ever keep green the memory of "the brave that are no more." By their sacrifices they made possible the triumph of Right over Might, and the establishment of Righteousness, justice and peace amongst the nations of the world. Who can forget their lovable personalities, their sterling worth and their steadfastness of purpose? Fighting for the emancipation of the world, gladly they toiled, gladly they suffered, and gladly they made the last great sacrifice of all, that "the thousand wars of old may give place to the thousand years of peace."

BARVAS SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Barvas Park, Lower Barvas, Upper Barvas and Brue.)

Population last Census, 691 (Males, 339; Females, 352).

It is with mingled feelings of sorrow and pride that we recall the years which have passed since that August morning when the peace of the Sabbath was so rudely disturbed by the distribution of mobilisation notices—foreshadowers of many anxious days to come; sorrow when we remember the comrades of our youth and those of a later day who were to us as children, and are now numbered with the dead, and pride when we recollect how the traits which we admired in them and the qualities we sought to develop in these bore such splendid fruit in the day of a nation's trial.

Like the rest of the Lewis villages Barvas and Brue were drained of the major portion of their manhood in the first week of the war, and very soon afterwards the inhabitants were made poignantly aware of the fact that war is no children's game by the news of the death in action on the 15th September of Pte. Angus Paterson, a boy of seventeen, who had joined the army in the previous year. Next month came the fall of Antwerp in which nine of our men were involved, and of whom five were interned in Holland, while the other four suffered the privations of four years' internment in Germany.

One of the Brue lads was lost in the blowing up of H.M.S. Bulwark in November, and in December Norman Matheson, Lower Barvas, and Sergt. Donald Allan Finlayson, Brue, were killed in France—the latter had joined his Majesty's Forces before he was sixteen years of age—so that within four months of the declaration of war quite an appreciable percentage of the young men of the district had given their lives in the world fight for freedom.

The loss of the Viknor in the early part of 1915 opened up anew the sores of the previous year, and in April came word of the death in action of Pte. Alex. Hunter, the first to fall of that gallant band of our young men who, in the far North-West, heard the call of the Mother Country, and rushed to aid her in her sore distress.

The year 1916 was a disastrous one for these dauntless heroes of the prairie and in the autumn of that year fell Kenneth Maclean, Colin Smith and Neil Murray, the latter of whom had crossed to France with the first contingent of Princess Patricia's Light Infantry in 1914.

By the end of the following year practically all of the young men of the district who were connected with the Cameron Highlanders had either fallen in action or were discharged unfit, and the fact that one of their number, Sergt. Donald Macleod, 1 Upper Barvas, was awarded the D.C.M. testifies to the gallantry with which they upheld the glorious traditions of that famous regiment.

The final year of the war further depleted the number of those who came over from Canada, and, with the death in action of Ptes. Norman MacDougal and Norman Macleod, forty per cent. of their number had fallen. In this year also fell that promising and brilliant young student, Sergt. Finlay Maciver, and Sergt. Allan J. Morrison who had taken part in all the principal engagements of the war, had been twice wounded and had been awarded the D.C.M., was reported missing on the 11th April. It afterwards transpired that he had been left on the field suffering from twelve bullet wounds. He had accounted for many a Hun and they had their revenge at last.

In all the principal sea fights the men of this district took a part; they helped to sink the Cap Trafalgar, to destroy Von Spee's squadron off the Falklands, and at the battle of Jutland two of them went down with the Invincible.

The following awards for bravery testify to excellent behaviour in action:—The Serbian gold medal was awarded by the Sovereign of that gallant little nation to Gunner Donald Mackay, 9 Upper Barvas, Ross Mountain Battery. The Military Medal was awarded to Pte. Colin Macdonald, 2 Brue (Seaforths), who single-handed captured eleven Germans and worked a Lewis gun until it was knocked out by a German shell. Sergt. Donald Macleod, 1 Upper Barvas, Camerons, won the D.C.M. for conspicuous bravery in action, and Sergt. Allan J. Morrison (Seaforths) the D.C.M. for conspicuous gallantry in refusing to surrender his platoon, and subsequently taking them safely out of what appeared a hopeless situation.

From the village of Brue in which there are twenty-eight crofts fifty-seven men were on active service, or an average of two men from each croft—a fact well worth noting by our future politicians. Forty-two per cent. of the male population of the whole district served and of these twenty-one per cent. gave their lives—truly an honourable record for a people whose love of peace and order is exceeded only by their love of justice and freedom.

BRAGAR SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Arnol, North Bragar and South Bragar.)

Population last Census, 1055: (Males, 490; Females, 565).

On South Bragar fell heavily the sad “Iolaire” disaster. Seven of the finest men and smartest seamen on the West Side were lost that morning, leaving in every case helpless dependents to mourn their loss.

The township is proud of Lieut. Alex. Finlayson, R.N.R., 53 S. Bragar. Originally a teacher he turned to the mercantile marine. He qualified as mate and as captain as fast as the regulations would allow. When war broke out he offered his services and experience to the Government, and was soon in command of a squadron of trawlers and mine-sweepers patrolling the English Channel and North Sea. For his able work there he was awarded the D.S.C.

Sergt. Donald Macaulay, A.I.F., also distinguished himself and earned the M.M. and D.C.M. Unfortunately he lost his right arm, and is now at home in 43 South Bragar as cheery and bright as ever.

Another South Bragar man, Pte. Don. Finlayson, of the Canadians, brother of Lieut. Finlayson, carried to his Canadian home the Military Medal, earned by distinguished bravery in France.

From South Bragar 94 men were on service, and 21 made the supreme sacrifice:

--Officers—1 Lieut., R.N.R.; 1 Lieut., Army. Decorations—1 D.S.C., 1 D.C.M., 2 M.M.’s, and Stars in most cases.

North Bragar has also done its little bit and the township has honourable scars to show, and, alas, empty places to lament. Among the veterans Murdo Mackay, 7 North Bragar, holds a commission as Captain in the Newfoundland Contingent. He was one of the Regular Army and retired years ago, but when the need came he was there as keen as a young ’un. In his army days Captain Mackay was a fine all-round athlete and held the belt for years as champion boxer in the Scottish Command. Both overseas and at home he rendered valuable services and was a deservedly popular officer.

Pte. Angus Macleod, 36 North Bragar, won the M.M., and was recommended for the Croix de Guerre for special bravery on the field on the Somme in July, 1916. Twice wounded and once gassed this gallant “Contemptible” was through the whole war and carries his hard-earned Mons Star and M.M. with characteristic modesty.

Cohn Mackay, R.N.R., of 4 North Bragar, has by his gallantry and devotion to duty won the D.S.M. The “Iolaire” disaster also claimed its victims and one of the most popular and likeable lads of the village, Murdo Mackay, R.N.R., 7 North Bragar, perished. From this village 66 joined the Colours and 5 lost their lives. Officers—1 Captain and 1 Lieutenant, R.A.F. Decorations—1 D.S.M.

The gallant little township of Arnol shows a very fine record. Ninety men were on service and of these sixteen gave their lives for King and Country. Four commissioned officers gave honour to their township, 1 Lieut.-Colonel, 1 Captain (Chaplain), and 2 Army Lieutenants, one of whom, not content with fighting the enemy on terra firma joined the R.A.F. and qualified as an air pilot. One D.S.O., two D.C.M.’s, one M.C. and one M.M., with a host of Stars, speak for the bravery and efficiency of the Arnol boys.

LIEUT.-COLONEL DAVID MACLEOD, D.S.O., was a son of the late Mr William Macleod, Arnol, Barvas. He enlisted in the Seaforth Highlanders before he was quite sixteen years of age. In 1895, volunteering for special service in connection with the organisation of the new Egyptian Army, he went out as one of the small band of Sergeant-Instructors (of whom Lewis provided two), immortalised by Kipling in "Pharaoh and the Sergeant." The task of turning the spiritless Fellaheen into fighting soldiers was at the time deemed hopeless by many, but the British instructors proved themselves "a charm for making riflemen from mud." With the young army thus created Lieut.-Col. Macleod served throughout Lord Kitchener's reconquest of the Sudan. He was present at the Battle of Fisket (June, 1896), and served in the Nile Expeditions of 1897 and 1898. He fought in Sir Hector Macdonald's famous Brigade at the Battles of the Atbara and Omdurman. In admiration of the perfect steadiness and gallant conduct of the 2nd Egyptians (trained by Lt.-Colonel Macleod) at Omdurman, Stevens, in "With Kitchener to Khartoum," described them as "the best trained and disciplined battalion in the world." During 1899 Lt.-Col. Macleod served on the White Nile and in Kordofan with the forces pursuing the Khalifa. For his services he was mentioned in Lord Kitchener's despatches, received the Khedive's Medal with 6 clasps, the Queen's Sudan Medal, medal for Distinguished Conduct in the Field, and, as a further reward, a commission in the Cameron Highlanders. In the South African War he served continuously for over two years, seeing service in Cape Colony, the Free State, and the Transvaal, where he was wounded and again mentioned in Lord Kitchener's despatches for Distinguished Conduct in the Field, at the same time receiving the Queen's Medal with three clasps and the King's Medal with two clasps. Towards the end of the war he joined the South African Constabulary, popularly known as Baden Powell's Police. When peace was declared he was made a District Commandant and a Justice of the Peace. After two years with the South African Constabulary he volunteered for active service in Somaliland, and served four years with the King's African Rifles in Central Africa, British East Africa, and Uganda. During that period he took part in the Sotik Punitive Expedition, served with the Nandi Field Force. He received the African General Service Medal with two clasps, and five years after receiving his commission was specially promoted to the rank of Captain in the Gordon Highlanders in recognition of his varied services in the field. In 1907 he again accepted service in the Sudan, to organise and command the Camel Corps Training School at Khartoum; and he saw service with the Camel Corps on the Blue Nile in 1908. After being stationed with his Battalion (2nd Gordons) for two years in India, he was appointed to the Depot in Aberdeen, and retired early in 1914, after later in the year, on war being declared, he volunteered his services, and was appointed to the 8th Gordon Highlanders, with the rank of Major. He served in the field in France from the beginning of May until 25th September, 1915, when he was seriously wounded at the storming of the Hohenzollern Redoubt. For his “conspicuous gallantry and devotion” in this engagement he was given the Distinguished Service Order. “In the attack on the Hohenzollern Redoubt,” the official record states, “although wounded three times, he continued to lead his Company forward till he fell from exhaustion.” After recovering, he was given a staff appointment in France, but he applied again for service in the firing line. On 19th December, 1917, he died in hospital in France of pneumonia, brought on by shell gas.

Lieut.-Col. Macleod owed his success to none of the accidents or advantages of birth or position, but to his sterling qualities of character and high ideals of work and duty and to his passionate love of his profession. He was a fine soldier, and a born leader of men, and though a stern disciplinarian, he was beloved by those serving under him, every man of whom would have followed him anywhere. He set a fine example of what he conceived to be his duty, and his high courage and earnestness of purpose—the outcome of his simple faith—gave him great influence over those with whom he lived and worked. He was singularly modest and retiring, but to those to whom he gave his friendship he represented a high standard of life and service.

The following official intimation of his death was issued on the field:

Special Notice to — Service Battalion the Gordon Highlanders.

“The Commanding Officer regrets to intimate the death on the 19th inst. of Lt.-Col. D. Macleod, D.S.O.—one of the finest officers in the Army—who for seventeen months has been in command of the Battalion. He desires to place on record his long and faithful services to his King and Country. Colonel Macleod joined the Army over 30 years ago, and during that time has served with distinction in many lands. His example in joining up again on the outbreak of war, immediately after a very severe illness, was typical of his patriotism and devotion to his life’s calling. He was dangerously wounded at Loos, and rejoined the 8th Battalion in the spring of 1916 as Second-in-Command, and assumed Command of the — in July of that year. His long service in tropical countries made service in the severe winters of this country very hard on him, but his indomitable spirit surmounted these hard tests, and now he has passed away at his post, like the true soldier he was. His high sense of duty; his conception of the soldier’s calling, will be an example to all and something to emulate. Always mindful of his men, his memory will be cherished by all who had the good fortune to serve under him.”

LIKE all other districts in the Lewis the villages of the Shawbost area readily responded to the call, and their sons came from all parts of the world to help stem the tide of barbarism which threatened to overwhelm western civilisation. Out of a population of 408 males, 48 per cent. served in His Majesty's land and sea forces, and the number of decorations and promotions earned testify to the fighting qualities of these sons of the soil. Two Reservemen, viz., Murdo Mackay, 55 North Shawbost, and Colin Mackay, 20 North Shawbost, were awarded the D.S.M., and a young naval engineer, Murdo Macleod, 50 North Shawbost, was awarded the D.S.M., for bravery in Jutland Battle. In the land forces Capt. Murdo Macphail, 8 South Shawbost, was awarded the D.C.M. and the French M.M. Sergt.-Major Donald Macleod, 27 South, the M.M., and was several times mentioned in despatches. Corpl. Angus Murray, 43 South Shawbost (Canadians) was also awarded the M.M., and Sgt.-Major Kenneth Macleod of 45 South Shawbost was awarded the D.C.M. Sergt. D. Maciver (Canadians), Carnan House, had the honour of being several times mentioned in despatches.

It is sad to relate that some of those who earned these decorations did not live to wear them, and indeed the district lost a large percentage of her gallant boys on sea and land. The village of North Shawbost lost twelve, two at sea and ten in the land forces. South Shawbost lost eight and New Shawbost five. To these again must be added the eleven brave men who lost their lives in sight of home in the ill-fated "Iolaire."

*Sergt. Donald Macleod, 14 Carloway; drowned 10th October, 1918.
We all remember the startling effect of the King's Mobilisation Order when read in the churches on that memorable Sabbath in August 1914. Animated by a high sense of duty the Naval Reservemen of the district manifested their loyalty and patriotism by their prompt and hearty response to the Royal Summons. In no single instance was there any hanging back. On the contrary the gallant men with eager and buoyant step were early on the road to report themselves at Stornoway. With equal alacrity and ardour did the soldiers answer their call "To Arms."

With commendable devotion the young men who had emigrated from the district to the Colonies, rallied manfully to the aid of the Motherland in the hour of its direst need.

It has also to be recorded that each township, greatly to its credit, contributed its own contingent of intelligent and well-equipped young women, who rendered valuable service as munition workers.

Sergeant Angus Macdonald, a gallant soldier of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, was the first to make the supreme sacrifice.

It wasn't long, however, until there began to arrive in rapid succession the painful tidings of the death of beloved ones.

The "Iolaire" disaster on that fateful New Year's morning was the crowning tragedy of the war for Lewis, when some 200 choice brave men were sacrificed. In that sad disaster Carloway lost six, bringing the total of killed and wounded for the district to 52.

As the official intimations of the killed and drowned in the course of the war, arrived, the grief and sorrow awakened were naturally intense, but the stricken families bore their cruel bereavement with becoming resignation, while their chastened and meek outward demeanour betokened the depth and poignancy of their sense of loss and sorrow.

The Roll stands as follows:

Population of District—1100. Percentage on War Service—24.3.

The peace of the Sabbath is happily not often disturbed as on that memorable August morning in 1914 when the postman delivered mobilization notices calling up the Royal Naval Reserve in defence of their country.

The noble lads quietly donned their uniforms; with grave faces well knowing the strength of their foe and the preparation which he had made in previous years for the coming conflict. Their determination and willingness to fight in the cause of freedom and the quiet confidence in ultimate victory marked on their brave and noble faces encouraged the mothers, wives, and sisters, and made the parting less sore. Henceforth the varying fortunes of war were eagerly and intelligently followed by the home folk in the official bulletins issued through the local post-offices.

Not long after their departure from their quiet homes they were searching distant seas for enemy ships and fighting in the trenches in France. Several were wounded in the first rush of the Germans for Paris, but were again in the fighting line before the spring offensive in 1915, when the first of them laid down their lives.

On the 27th April, 1915, Donald Macgregor, Tolsta, and Donald Maclean, Doune, fell in action. Next month came news of the death in action of four brave lads: Norman Macleod, Tolsta, a victim of the first use of poison gas by the Germans; Donald Macleod; Murdo Maclean from Doune; and Sergt. Malcolm Macleod, Tolsta. This latter had a splendid record of service having been through the South African War and several campaigns on the North-West Frontier of India. A nobler man or a more daring soldier it would be hard to meet. The ranks of our local heroes were again thinned in the advance on the Somme on 1st July, 1916, when John Macleod and Sergt. Murdo Macgregor made the supreme sacrifice.

In the subsequent years of the war the hearts of fond mothers in this district were pierced by bullets fired on the plains of Flanders and in Mesopotamia, where Neil Morrison, Doune, laid down his life for freedom and justice.

Altogether the number of men from this school district who served in the war was ninety-eight, or 25 per cent. of the population.

The following table shows the relation of the fatalities to the number of men serving:

We are proud of the reply of our school district to the call of humanity and justice. We are also profoundly thankful that our noble lads have helped to attain the ideal for which they fought so valiantly, and that once more right has triumphed over might.

To those who mourn the loss of near relations it will be their chief consolation that they have been sacrificed in establishing righteousness and justice amongst mankind.

BREASCLET SCHOOL DISTRICT.
(Breasclet and Callanish.)

Population last Census, 696 (Males, 335; Females, 361).

When the peace of that memorable Sunday in August, 1914, was broken by the issue of mobilisation summons to men connected with the Navy and Army, great activity on the part of the men and consternation on the part of parents was noticeable throughout the district.

Hurried calls of farewell were made, and with optimism the youthful heroes under a sense of duty departed. Alas! some never to return. The dogged determination of the Highlander is 'to fight and grapple with your enemy to the death.'

No doubt many thought they saw an opportunity opening to them to add to the magnificent fighting record of Lewismen who had participated in previous wars.

Subsequent events proved that we were all in the dark as to the preparedness and military strength of our allied enemies. We paid dearly throughout the grim struggle which was conducted on novel modern lines of warfare.

Pride at the part played by Lewismen, with other gallant Highlanders, in France, and our Navymen on sea is commingled with grief felt for those who have lost their dear ones in the various regions to which the world war spread.

We have also with us 'physical wrecks,' mementoes of the marvellous skill displayed by our army of doctors and nurses who gave of their best in connection with the war.

Our pity is extended to those gallant fellows whose health has been ruined, or whose injuries to head or limb render them unfit and unable to follow out their respective occupation in pre-war days.

From the township of Breasclet, 100 men gave military service in one form or another, but almost all in connection with the Navy. Of these 20 made the supreme sacrifice. Aulay Macaulay, 28 Breasclet, was the first to fall, and soon after Kenneth Macaulay, 3 Breasclet, was reported to be lost with H.M.S. "Clan Macnaughton." How and where this ship was lost is unknown.

Neil Maciver, 40 Breasclet, lost two sons. Angus Macaulay, Breasclet, had five sons on service, and one of these was lost.

New Park's contingent was 7 men, and these survived the critical days of the war.

Callanish out of 67 service men lost 16, or 24 per cent.

Finlay Maclean, 21 Callanish, lost three sons; the late Louis Mackenzie, (1) and Angus Maclean (18) respectively two sons. These boys were all reared in the very shadow of the wide-famed Druidical Stones of Callanish—monuments of the remote past apt to direct the youthful mind towards the prowess and energy of their ancestors as evidenced in the erection of these mysterious stones.

THE Editor of "Loyal Lewis" Roll of Honour has asked me to write a short preface to the honourable list of the heroes of the Great War from the Bernera School District.

I am not a Lewisman by birth, but I began my scholastic career in the island of Bernera over twenty years ago, and since I have been associated with the island through many ties of friendship and sentiment, and for that reason very much value the privilege afforded to me by the devoted editor of "Loyal Lewis" on this occasion.

Bernera is an island held fast within the eternal grasp of Loch Roag. To some it might be the "Ultima Thule" of Eilean an Phraoich, but though owing to its geographical position, it may be somewhat removed from the bigger centres of activity throughout the parent island, still it has charms and attractions peculiar to itself, and the people who inhabit it have maintained untarnished many of the excellent traits of friendship, hospitality, and devotion to one another, which have been the hallmark of the genuine Highlander of by-gone days. The land is poor, but the inexhaustible resources of the boundless Atlantic, which continually worries its shores, have proved through the ages the very staff of life of the islanders. The sea, therefore, plays an all important part in the life of the people; it is mysteriously entwined in their speech and song, and its varying moods govern their daily tasks. Every man is an expert fisherman; in fact, a past master in that calling, for it is generally admitted that when a Bernera crew cannot face Callanish or Tob na Muille, no other "sgioba" need unfurl a sail. This profound love of the sea is fully evident when one reads over the lists of those gallant heroes from Bernera who willingly faced the grim foe in the strife for righteousness. The vast majority of them chose to defend our seas. True, many of them were in the ranks of the R.N.R. in pre-war days, but as the clouds of war grew darker and darker, and as the need for men became daily more clamant, the young men from every village and from almost every house in the island, without any hesitation and without any form of conscription, joined our glorious Navy, and their sea training from their boyhood soon made them experts in all duties pertaining to the defenders of our shores and the watchers of the mighty deep. Those who chose the Army gave an equally fine account of their bravery and daring, and their ranks shared in the many distinctions and honours won by our men on many a hard-fought field.

A perusal of the lists from Bernera is a very real interest to me. Many of those who names are enshrined there have been at one time my school pupils, and the majority of the rest are well known...

to me. Joy and sorrow spring up almost simultaneously in my heart as I scan each page. I rejoice to see that such a large number have come back to their dear ones bearing the palm of victory, and my genuine sympathy pours forth to the bereaved whose homes contain vacant chairs which can never be filled. Where the band of heroes is so great and where each has played his part so nobly and so well, it would be unjust of a person like me to carve special niches here and there singled out for a few select ones. I prefer to think of them as one noble band whose deeds deserve a very honourable place in the roll of "Loyal Lewis." B'e mo mhiann mar sin a' chlach bheag so a chur air an carra-cuimhe, agus is e durachd mo chríde gu'n bi sinne a bhios ag altrum an cuimhne, a' co-chumadh ar beatha ann a leithid de a'ogh agus gu'm bi sinn airidh air na sochairean mora a dh' eibhir iad-san a mach dhuinn air muir agus air kir. Croir.

MACLEOD—NEIL M., Lieut., National Reserve Recruiting Centre, Glasgow (24 Barrington Drive, Glasgow, W.) *JAMES R. 'V., Corpl., Scottish Rifles; killed in action in France, 23rd March, 1918; aged 24. DAVID. (Father and two Sons).
When mobilization notices were distributed here in August, 1914, the recipients accepted the summons "to arms" with quiet readiness, but with determination to obey the call of duty, and await the consequences. As time wore on, and it became patent to all that this country was to be embroiled in a life-and-death struggle against Prussian militarism—the pernicious "Kultur" which meant German world domination, and the tyrannization of the strong over the weak, many more voluntarily offered their services—themselves—in order to prevent the consummation of such a tragedy, and so defend their country and their dear ones from the brutal savagery and oppression of a cruel and merciless foe.

All the villages gave freely and gave of their best. In proportion to its population Crowlista heads the list. The census of 1911 gives the population of Crowlista and Aird as 279. As there was a large influx of people from other parts of the Island at the time of the census returns, these figures are in excess of the actual number of persons resident in the village. Reference to the School District census for 1913—the year prior to the war—shows a population, within the 2-mile limit, of 171. Other 19 persons outside this limit, which comprises the Crowlista district (omitting Aird) makes up a total of 190 (93 males and 97 females). These figures are quite reliable, as they were compiled by the late respected compulsory officer for the district, Mr Malcolm Macritchie, Crowlista. The Roll of Honour for the district of Crowlista is 57. This gives a percentage of 30 for the whole population, and 61.3 for the men—truly a splendid record, one to be proud of and one hard to beat.

Very early in the strife, the actualities of the war began to be felt. In September, 1914, Widow Buchanan, 11 Brenish, got word that her son, Pte. Malcolm John Buchanan, was missing; and in November, Lance-Sergt. John Macdonald, 2 Crowlista, was reported missing. For a time, some faint hopes were entertained that they might be still living, but these hopes were not realised. Confirmation of their death in action came later on. The fall of Antwerp brought an anxious pang to the hearts of many throughout the various townships as 17 of their men were engaged in that fateful expedition. It was soon ascertained that 12 of these had escaped to Holland, where they interned. For some time there were grave fears as to the safety of the other five. It afterwards transpired that they were prisoners in Germany. Relief was felt that they were living anywhere.

Even in Germany.

Valtos received its first great shock in February, 1915,
*Malcolm Mackay, Camerons, 16 Valtos; killed 5th May, 1915.

*Gunner Angus Macleod, R.N.R., Bridgend, Brenish; died 7th October, 1918.

*Sergt. Peter Macleod, Canadians, Bridgend, Brenish; killed 24th April, 1915.

*Lance-Sergt. Wm. Macneill, Seaforths; 1 Carishader; holds D.C.M. and Russian Order of St. George (4th Class); killed 9th May, 1915.

when word came that Seaman Norman Maciver, No. 25, was lost from H.M.S. "Inconstant." During the year, two other Valtos lads fell in France, namely, Pte. Malcolm Mackay, No. 16, and Pte. Kenneth Mackay, No. 34. In April Mr Donald Macleod, Bridgend, Brenish, received news of the death in France of his son, Sergt. Peter Macleod, who, having heard his country's call for help, left America, and joined up early in the war. In May, another splendid soldier—Lee.-Sergt. William Macneil, Carishader, was lost. He had nine years' service in India, where he had won a medal and clasp before coming to Flanders. At Givenchy he won the D.C.M. for gallantry in action, and was also awarded the Russian Cross of the Order of St George. In September of that year the death of Sergt. Donald Macleod, Enaclete, brought sadness to his own family and to his village. In 1916 Kneep lost two fine lads in April and July respectively, viz., Sergt. Donald Macdonald, 4; and Pte. John Buchanan, 6. In October Mr Norman Maciver lost his second son during the war.

Till the spring of 1917, Crowlista men were singularly free from dire mishaps. Except that of Lee.-Sergt. John Macdonald, No. 2, early in the war, no deaths were recorded till April of that year when news of the death of Pte. Peter Maclean, Australians, was received. In August came the sad news of Pte. Donald Nicolson's death in hospital in France, "Domh'ul Beag," as he was familiarly called, was one of the first who pluckily volunteered to offer his services under Lord Derby's scheme. A brother of his was lost in the "Iolaire" disaster, and another was interned in Holland. There were five brothers in the Service.

Mr Hugh Mackay, 31 Valtos, had also five sons serving. One of them, Q.M.S. Angus Mackay, was accidentally killed in Egypt, and one—Captain John Mackay—served with distinction in the Mercantile Marine Service. He was invalidated home with pulmonary trouble and died in January, 1919. Another—Sergt. Donald Mackay—is the holder of the Military Medal. There are several cases in West Uig where four sons were serving out of one family.

The death-roll for 1918 is by far the heaviest of the war, and individual mention of prowess and endurance is impossible within the limited space of these notes.

Practically every village lost one or more of its sons before November (Armistice). A peculiar case is that of Seaman Donald Maciver, 9 Aird. His father was notified of his death, when his ship, s.s. "Sarnia" went down on 12th September. Some time after, his mother received a letter, written by himself, and dated 12th September, 1918. This raised some faint hopes of the possibility of his survival, but such was not the case. He went down with his ship. When the Armistice was signed in November all breathed a sigh of relief, hoping and thinking that no further casualties would fall to be recorded. Towards the end of December there was a flutter of excitement and suppressed happiness at the prospect of the homecoming of so many for the Xmas leave. Alas! alas! how appallingly sudden and tragical were those hopes dashed to pieces when, on New Year's morning, the "Iolaire" with one fell swoop, carried with it, almost in a twinkling, into the depths of the sea, some 200 of the flower of our Lewis manhood. What seems to make this calamity more poignant is that those brave fellows were lost just outside the entrance into Stornoway Harbour—practically at their own door steps. Like the rest of the Island, West Uig suffered heavily in this disaster. Uigen lost two of her finest lads, Brenish lost other two of her best, and Crowlista lost six—all picked men, remarkable for their virtue, their wisdom, and their excellence of disposition and character.

The villages of the Crulivig School area, out of a population of 81 males had 31 men on service. Crulivig gave 16 men to the Army and Navy, including 1 Canadian, 1 Australian, and 3 U.S. Army. Three made the supreme sacrifice—Malcolm Macleod (No. 1), who was killed in October, 1915; Kenneth Ferguson (No. 6), Seaforths, died December, 1917; and John Ferguson (No. 6), U.S. Army, killed 1918; Sergt. Angus Ferguson (No. 6), Canadians, was severely wounded and taken prisoner at St. Julien. His left leg was amputated in Germany, and in 1915 he was exchanged for a German prisoner of war. The township of Lundale gave 13 men to the service. of the Country, of whom no fewer than 5 laid down their lives. It is questionable if there is a heavier percentage of losses in any other village in the Island. Three sons of Mr Norman Macaulay (No. 3), made the supreme sacrifice, namely, John (Seaforths), killed in Flanders; Angus (Seaforths), killed in Mesopotamia; and Donald (R.N.R.), drowned at sea. No less than 7 sons of Mr Donald Macleod (No. 5) were on service, and two of them were killed—Rodk., Seaforths, in March, 1915, and Angus in December, 1917.

We can only express sympathy with the bereaved, gratitude to those who have fought well and returned, and reverence and grateful memory of those who have sacrificed their lives in defence of their country and their beloved.

It must be a consolation to all that these sacrifices were not in vain, but that the end for which our men fought and died has been achieved, that the cause of Right, Freedom and Truth has been vindicated, and that civilization has been freed from the incubus of a false "Kultur" which meant brutality, oppression and wrong.

Gallant and Daring Valtos Soldier.

CAPT. ALEXANDER MACLENNAN, of the 16th Batt. Canadians, son of Mr Donald Maclellan, 24 Valtos, and a former pupil of the Nicolson Institute, enlisted at the outbreak of war and went to France, where he was wounded.

In April, 1918, he was awarded the Military Cross. The official memorandum of the award is as follows:—“During a raid he made repeated reconnaissances of the most daring and thorough nature on the previous nights. He made a careful preparation for the raid and took part in the attack, collecting maps and papers that contained valuable information. His courage, coolness, and perseverance were a fine example to all.”

A Bar was added to his M.C. in August of the same year, when—

“He played an important part in keeping the Battalion in proper direction through the dense mist of smoke. At one point a portion of the Battalion being held up by a determined machine gun, he crawled round through a sunken road alone and came on the machine gun crew of five from a flank, shooting them all with his own hand. In the last stages of the advance he took forward a party and captured a regimental headquarters with the regimental commander and his entire staff. He showed the greatest courage, determination and skill throughout.”
33 MACKAY—*ANGUS, Gordons; killed in action in France, 28th June, 1917; aged 33 years. DONALD, R.N.R.T. (Sons of Mr William Mackay).

ACHMORE SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Achmore, Lochganvich and Cleascro.)

Population last Census, 202 (Males, 91; Females, 111.)

This School District, with a male population of 91, had 27 men on service during the war, a percentage of nearly 30.

It is worthy of note that although the townships in the Achmore area are, among the hundred villages of Lewis, the only ones not situated on or near the sea shore, nearly half of the men serving were in the Royal Naval Reserve. Another notable fact is that the little band of Achmore men included four Colonials from widely scattered parts of the world, two from Canada, one from South Africa and one from Australia. Those fighting in the land forces saw service in the various theatres of the war and not a few laid down their lives. Among the war-broken men who returned to their homes an outstanding case is that of Finlay Maclean, 4 Lochganvich, who served with the Black Watch and sustained terrible injuries at Salonica. In a night attack he was twice wounded, and had to have his right leg amputated, while his right hand was partly blown away and his left shoulder damaged. Dragging his smashed limb, this hero made his way back over a mile of broken country to the dressing station, and after receiving first aid there, attempted to make further back to the field hospital. He, however, fainted outside the dressing station and was conveyed by a stretcher bearer party to hospital, where his leg had to be amputated. The district lost seven men, all of them from Achmore village, out of 19 men serving, which must be among the highest percentage of casualties in the Island of Lewis. Croft No. 5 sent three men to the service of the King, and all three laid down their lives, namely, Duncan Mackay, of the Camerons, who was killed in France in December, 1914, his brother John, who served with the Seaforths and died in Mesopotamia in May, 1915; also their cousin, Donald Smith, who perished in the “Iolaire” disaster.

THE village of Grimshader, with a population of 109 males, gave 42 men to the service of King and Country in the war. As in probably all other districts of the island the great majority served on sea—in the case of Grimshader 37 out of 42. Our men were early in the fight; Malcolm Macleod (No. 3) and John Mackenzie (No. 12b) took part in the successful action of H.M.S. "Carmania" against the enemy cruiser "Cap Trafalgar"; Evander Macrae (No. 5) and Kenneth Maclean (No. 15) formed part of the crew of H.M.S. "Orama," which was largely composed of Lewismen. They shared in the credit of sinking the German cruiser "Dresden." Several Grimshader men were in the R.N. Division that rushed to the defence of Antwerp, and three of them were interned in Holland after that city fell. The most noteworthy fact in Grimshader's record is that it alone of all the Lewis villages came through the whole of the war till the Armistice without the loss of a single life. Alas! when an end of hostilities had come, and a feeling of security had taken possession of all hearts, came the "Tolaire" disaster, in which two of our men lost their lives, namely, Malcolm Macleod (No. 3) and John Macaulay (No. 11b).

FIDIGARRY SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Raerinish and Crossbost.)

Population last Census, 780 (Males, 379; Females, 401).

This district includes the townships of Raerinish and Crossbost. The total number of men who saw service during the war was 232 or nearly 30 per cent. of the population as at last census. The fatalities amounted in Raerinish to 28 and in Crossbost to 10, or 18.8, and 12 per cent. respectively of the men engaged. There were five cases of families having five sons each on service at the same time. These were the sons of the late Duncan Macleod, 7 Raerinish, the late Angus Macleod, 1 Raerinish; the late John Macleod, 18 Raerinish; the late Torquil Macleod, 42 Raerinish, whose two sons-in-law were engaged, and Murdo Mackinnon, 8 Raerinish.

One of the most distressing deaths was that of John Macleod, 33 Raerinish, of the Royal Navy, and, at the outbreak of the war a Coastguardsman at Stornoway, who was bayonnetted by a sentinel at North Berwick through some mischance in the early months of the War. John Macleod was one who impressed all with whom he came in contact as a sailor who typified in an extraordinary degree the dauntless spirit of the British Navy. Other losses quickly followed. A Raerinish man, Kenneth Macleod, 7 Raerinish, fell in the duel between the "Carmania" and the "Cap Trafalgar," and a Crossbost man, Alex. Mackenzie, 4 Crossbost, was the first man of the Lewis Mountain Battery to fall.

As the war went on men who had been born in the district joined up from North America, South America, and Australia. It was touching to read letters from some of these to their parents communicating their intention, and explaining that they considered it their duty to "do their bit." Long may our country breed such sons! As remarkable a case as any of these was that of Roderick Thomson, 29 Raerinish, who left Fidigarry School in September at the age of fourteen, entered the Nicolson Institute, obtained the Intermediate Certificate in April, joined the Army three months later, and in three months more was in the trenches in France at the age of fifteen.

Several men belonging to the district were interned in Holland at the time of the capture of Antwerp by the Germans, four more at least were prisoners in Germany, two of whom were forced to work in the trenches on the German front against the Russians. Another of the four made his escape from Germany to Holland, at the third attempt, and just prior to the Armistice. This was Murdo Macmillan, 17 Crossbost, and he was accompanied by an Australian and a Londoner. They travelled by night and hid by day, and after suffering many hardship succeeded in getting across the frontier. The fourth, who was a wounded prisoner, lay for a considerable time in an hospital in Germany, and on his recovery was transferred to Saxony, and there employed under a farmer in agricultural work. His was the most favourable fate, and he succeeded in winning the esteem of the farmer, his wife, and family. He relates how the farmer’s wife wept over the dethronement of the Kaiser.

Perhaps the event of the actual war which created the greatest sensation in the district was the first report of the Battle of Jutland. This was natural, seeing our population is, to such a large extent, sea-faring. Second only to this in the effect produced was the near approach to Paris in 1914, and again in 1918.

But the sensation caused by these events, great as they were, paled by comparison with the dumb stupefaction, the utter collapse that took away all men’s breath when the tragic story of the loss of the “Iolaire,” on the 1st of January, 1919, began to get abroad. What man living in Lewis can ever forget that fatal New Year’s morning! Beautiful and touching in the extreme were the lines “Home at Last,” appearing in the following issue of the “Stornoway Gazette,” and expressing in fitting language the thoughts that filled all our hearts when that most melancholy of the war’s events took place.

It is not possible within the brief space which the editor of this book can allow to enter more fully into details that mainly concern the district, but we may be allowed to express the gratitude which we must all feel to the soldiers and sailors who have returned home for their valiant defence of their country; our resolve to hold for ever our heroic dead in grateful memory, and by our efforts to establish a nation in righteousness to prove that these sacrifices have not been made in vain; and our sympathy with their sorrowing friends, whose chief consolation must be that Britain’s sons have fallen in as just and noble a cause as any for which a nation ever drew the sword.

LEURBOST, in common with the other villages of Lewis, has just cause to be proud of the share taken by her gallant sons in the memorable struggle with a fierce and unscrupulous foe. At the first call in August, 1914, fully one hundred men rushed to the post of duty, and in a short time over 140 were in arms. There was hardly a single family without a representative doing duty for King and Country. The appeal for recruits did not fall on deaf ears, every fit man volunteered for service from the very start, and so eager were the young lads to do their bit, that when rejected by the military authorities, owing to the fact of being under 18 years of age, they at once enrolled in the Naval forces.

Nothing could be finer than the magnificent rally to the Colours of natives resident in distant parts of the world. From the four corners of the earth they came, almost to a man, to join their brothers in the trenches and on the high seas. All honour to these heroes, who, in the hour of Britain's need, "scorned delights to live laborious days."

Equally worthy of mention is the part played by the men who manned the merchant ships, braving the dangers of mine and submarine, and to "keep the home fires burning," they would not be intimidated by the frightfulness of the Huns.

Our losses, in dead and wounded, are commensurate with the number on service—twenty-eight (20 per cent.) having fallen. One family (Mrs Roderick Mackenzie, 25 Leurbost) lost three sons, Murdo and Kenneth Smith and John Mackenzie (step-son). Mrs Donald Mackenzie, 16 Leurbost, mourns the loss of two sons, John and Alexander, both drowned in the wreck of the "Iolaire," in which no fewer than 11 lives were lost, the other nine being:— Alexander Mackenzie and Allan Macleod, both No. 11; Kenneth Smith, No. 28; Donald Smith, No. 34; Donald Maclean, No. 35; Roderick Macdonald, No. 36; Murdo Maclean, No. 39; Angus Macdonald, No. 42; and Angus Macleod, No. 46.

Three Leurbost men passed weary months and years as prisoners of war in Germany, and one of them, Donald Nicolson, died in hospital there. He was in the fighting line at the commencement of hostilities and fell into the hands of the enemy in December, 1914.

Sergt. Donald N. Mackinnon, Seaforth Highlanders, was awarded the Military Medal, and Lance-Sergeant Malcolm Macleod, also of the county regiment, received the Italian Order of Merit.

Early in the war Mrs Donald Macdonald, 42 Leurbost, had the misfortune to lose two sons—Murdo, in the naval fight of Jutland, and Peter, in the advance to the relief of Kut, Mesopotamia.

KNOCKIANDUE SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Laxay and Keose.)

Population last Census, 341 (Males, 171; Females, 170).

In common with other districts in the Island of Lewis, the men of Keose and Laxay rushed to the colours when the foe was at the gates, and helped to carry the Old Flag to victory both on land and sea. Some, who owed their birth to Eilean an Fhraoich, and had left the heather isle in their earlier years for an adopted home across the seas, responded to the call to assist their countrymen in arms, and hurried at the news of battle to live or die for their country's cause.

How little did teachers dream, when they were instructing the boys a few short years ago in the history of a Bannockburn or a Flodden that, in another brief period of time, they themselves would represent the "boys" in greater battles than either of the above-named famous fields.

Though some, alas! have gone to that bourne from which no traveller returns, and we shall never again clasp on earth the vanished hand, or hear the sound of the voice that is still, may those who have been left behind to mourn their loss, be comforted by the assurance that they died in a noble cause, and that a grateful nation will never forget to provide for themselves, that they may be enabled to weather the future storms of life, as a reward for the sacrifice of their near and dear ones, who have not fallen in vain, but died that we might live.

While we sympathise with those who have borne the heat and burden of the day, and have returned with maimed limbs and broken down systems, we rejoice that they have been spared by a merciful Providence to mingle with their friends at home again; and that they, too, will receive meet provision for the sufferings and trials they have endured.

Now that the great and ghastly war is over, and the Dove of Peace has alighted on the disturbed nations of the earth, we welcome back to "Blighty" her hardy sons of toil; and pray that they may long be spared to stand a wall of fire around their much-loved isle.

And as the thoughts of those who have been bereft of husband, son, brother, or lover wander across the Channel to their last resting place on the soil of sunny France, may they be cheered by the recollection that their loved ones sleep as peacefully there as they would have done in the old churchyard of their native village; that their graves will never be forgotten, and will be tended through the years to come by a grateful country, in memory of duty done.

And if, perchance, in future years, a pilgrimage be made by them to a dear one's tomb, whose welcome while on earth ever smiled, and farewell went out sighing, may their grief be assuaged when they realise that their darling like a soldier fell, and died for his King and Country in a righteous cause.

Mr ROBERT PATTERSON, Keose School-house.
The Roll of Honour for the above-named district, embracing the townships of Keose and Laxay, contains the names of 71, who served at home or at the front—27 from the former, and 44 from the latter.

The majority of those who hailed from the village of Keose belonged to the Royal Naval Reserve in pre-war days, and though some of them were engaged in the Battle of Jutland all came out of it scatheless.

Two joined the land forces, and, sad to relate, paid the supreme sacrifice, viz., Pte. Roderick Smith, aged 24 years, 7th Cameron Highlanders, son of Mr Angus Smith, Sub-Postmaster, and Pte. John Mackay, aged 31 years, son of Mr Donald Mackay. Pte. Smith was a young man of great promise, and of a kind and cheerful disposition. He endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact, and long will his pleasant face and happy smile be remembered among a wide circle of friends.

The latter, who was much esteemed and respected, emigrated to Canada many years ago, but had never returned to the old home. He will be sadly missed by his many friends with whom he parted in the days gone by, alas! for the last time on earth.

This village has the distinction of having reared a Private who rose to the rank of Colonel, in the person of A. F. Macdonald, son of the late Mr John Macdonald.

Colonel Macdonald acted as Assistant Chaplain-General at the front, and thus wielded the weapons of both peace and war.

Two of the sons of Laxay also gained distinction, viz., C.S.M. Donald Maciver, Seaforths, son of Mr Donald Maciver, and Corpl. Donald Maciver, 1st Scottish Rifles, son of the late Mr Murdo Maciver.

The former was awarded the M.M. for bravery in the field, in taking command of his battalion at a most critical moment; and the latter, the D.C.M. for "conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty," who, sad to tell, died of his wounds in the hour of victory. Though some from this township also served in the Royal Naval Reserve before the beginning of the war, and also took part in the Battle of Jutland without mishap, the majority joined the Army, and served in different Regiments, out of whom six were killed or died of wounds, and one was drowned.

Their names, &c., in order of decease are as follows:—

1. Angus Mackenzie, aged 21 years; Cameron Highlanders; son of the late Mr John Mackenzie. This young soldier, who was of a quiet and reserved disposition, and was loved by all who knew him, had a hard share in the war, having suffered from frostbite during the first winter campaign, on recovery from which he was again sent into the firing line, where he received his mortal wound.

2. Corporal Angus Maciver, aged 35 years, Canadian Engineers, son of Mr Angus Maciver. This young Corporal emigrated to Canada 10 years ago, where he worked at his trade, as a bricklayer. A comrade, detailing the sad news of his death to a relative, wrote as follows:—"He was a fine fellow, a good soldier, and was much respected by all his brother N.C.O.'s and men. I miss him very much, as there were only the two of us from the same place."

3. Sergt. Alex. Mackenzie, aged 35 years, Australian Corps, son of Mr Malcolm Mackenzie. This young Sergeant, who was a carpenter in Australia at the outbreak of the war, was an affectionate son and brother, and was held in high estimation by all. He was missing for some time, which naturally caused deep anxiety to his relatives, and in the end the sad news arrived that he had died a prisoner of war in the hands of the Germans.

4. Pte. Donald Morrison, aged 23 years, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, son of Mr Donald Morrison. He was of an unassuming and inoffensive nature, and a youth whose memory will ever be kept green. His service at first in the Navy, which brought on his ill-health, led him on recovery to the Army, where he met with his sad yet glorious end.

5. Corporal Donald Maciver, aged 27, 1st Scottish Rifles, son of the late Mr Murdo Maciver. When a boy at school Corporal Maciver gave evidence of future promise, and was of a quiet and orderly disposition. He had a kind and lovable nature, and displayed more than average ability in all he undertook. Owing to the severe nature of his wounds he was Peggy Macleod, daughter of Mr Malcolm Macleod, joined the Women's Auxiliary Corps as a clerkess. She was an old pupil of Knockiandue Public School, and an Intermediate Bursar at the Nicolson Institute, Stornoway, before the outbreak of the war.

ROBERT PATERSON.

K E O S E.

1. MACDONALD—A.F., Colonel; Assistant Chaplain General, New Zealand Forces, organised hospital work and dealt with wounded in Gallipoli campaign. At end of 1915 was promoted Major. Mentioned in Sir Ian Hamilton’s despatches for his distinguished services, and received the thanks of the New Zealand Parliament. Was promoted Assistant Chaplain-General in 1917, with the rank of Colonel, and in 1918 was created an Officer of the Order of the British Empire by the King for his distinguished services. He also served in the South African War, and was mentioned in despatches both by Sir George White and General Walter Kitchener for his gallant conduct.

2. MACKENZIE—DONALD, Military Foot Police. ANGUS, R.A.M.C. (Son of the late Mr Colin Mackenzie).

3. MACKENZIE—RODERICK, Sergt.-Major, Seaforth. (Son of the late Mr John Mackenzie).

4. MACKENZIE—GEORGE, R.N.R. (Son of Mr Murdo Mackenzie).

5. MACLEOD—GEORGE, R.N.R. (Son of the late Mr Murdo Macleod).

6. SMITH—DONALD, Military Foot Police. (Son of the late Mr John Smith).

7. MACKENZIE—DONALD, Lovat Scouts. (Son of Mr Kenneth Mackenzie).

8. MACKENZIE—MURDO, R.N.R. (Son of the late Mr John Mackenzie).

9. MACAULAY—JOHN, R.N.R., DONALD, Canadians. (Son of the late Mr Angus Macaulay).

10. MONTGOMERY—ALEXANDER, R.N.R. (Son of the late Mr James Montgomery).

11. MACKAY—ANGUS, R.N.D.; was interned in Holland since fall of Antwerp; holds Mons Star. *JOHN, Canadians; killed in action in France, October, 1916, aged 31. (Sons of Mr Donald Mackay).

unable to be presented with his D.C.M. He received the riband, however, and the Medal was sent to his brother, Roderick Maciver, after his decease.

6. Sergt. George Macdonald, aged 30 years, Howitzer Bty., Canadian Field Artillery, son of the late Mr John Macdonald. Many old schoolmates, both at home and abroad, will remember the happy face of this young Sergeant, who seemed to have been cut out for a soldier. He was of athletic build, and of a military bearing, even when a boy, and was a strapping youth over six feet in height as a Sergeant.

7. Pte. John Macleod, aged 24 years, R.N.R. (Trawler Section), son of Mr Colin Macleod. This young seaman was the only victim from the district of the “Iolaire” disaster, on the New Year’s morn of 1919. After many weary days of anxious waiting, his body was recovered from the wreck, and buried in his native churchyard. A young man of prepossessing appearance, and of a kind and cheerful nature, he endeared himself to everyone who made his acquaintance; and his beaming smile, shared by all, made him a general favourite. The large concourse of mourners who attended his burial gave ample evidence of the deep respect and esteem in which he was held, and of the compassion evinced by the shedding of a flower in bloom. Had it not been that a large number of the Royal Naval Reservists arrived by the “Sheila” the same morning, or the previous one, it is most likely a much heavier human toll would have been exacted from both townships.

There were three narrow escapes from drowning, viz., that of Alex Mackenzie, R.N.R., son of the late Mr Colin Mackenzie, when the “Hermes” was torpedoed; and of the cousins John Macleod, R.N.R., son of the late Mr Fergus Macleod, also of the same warship, and Malcolm Macleod, leading seaman, R.N.R., son of the late Mr Malcolm Macleod, in the “Iolaire” disaster.

On the female side of the picture, Catherine Maciver, daughter of Mr John Maciver, who at one time was a nurse in the Hospital at Stornoway, had the honour of shaking hands with the Queen and the Princess Mary, on her departure for service as a nurse in France.

8 MACKENZIE—ALEXANDER, R.N.R.; rescued from H.M.S. "Hermes." (Son of Mr Colin Mackenzie).
9 MACIVER—*ANGUS, Cpl., Canadian Engineers; shot through the heart, and killed instantaneously while giving an order in the trenches in France, on the night of 10th Aug., 1916, aged 35. (Son of Mr Angus Maciver).
11 MACIVER—CATHERINE, Nurse; served in military hospital, West Park, Bedford, and afterwards in France in St. John's Brigade Ambulance Hospital. While at West Park Nurse Maciver received a presentation from the staff and a testimonial from the late Lord Lucas for services rendered in getting patients removed when the hospital took fire. (Daughter of Mr John Maciver).
12 MACIVER—RODERICK, R.N.R. COLIN, Canadian Engineers. *DONALD, Corporal, 1st Scottish Rifles; was awarded D.C.M. "for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy attack he observed a party of the enemy advancing to a farmhouse which commanded the posts held by his Company. He at once moved his Section forward to a position covering the entrances to the house. He beat back several enemy attacks by the well-controlled fire of his Section, and his prompt action and initiative materially assisted his Company in holding their ground." Died of wounds in France, 23rd September, 1918; aged 27 years. (Sons of late Mr Murdo Maciver).
13a MACIVER—DONALD, C.S.M., Seaforths; awarded the Military Medal for bravery in taking command when all the officers of the battalion had been knocked out. Was wounded in the leg but recovered. (Son of Mr Donald Maciver).
13b MACIVER—HECTOR, Corporal, Canadians. (Son of the late Mr John Maciver).
14 MACKENZIE—DONALD, Master Mariner, Mercantile Marine. ALEXANDER, Sergeant, Australians; wounded and taken prisoner, April, 1917; died of wounds in Germany, June, 1917; aged 35 years. (Sons of Mr Malcolm Mackenzie).
15 MACKENZIE—DONALD, R.N.R. (Son of the late Mr Malcolm Mackenzie).
16 MACLEOD—JOHN, R.N.R.; a survivor from H.M.S. "Hermes," torpedoed at the beginning of the war. A year afterwards his ship was again torpedoed, and he was taken as a prisoner on board a German submarine, but was set free on the approach of a French warship. DONALD, Seaforths. TORQUIL, Canadians. (Sons of the late Mr Fergus Macleod).

16b MACLEOD—MALCOLM, Leading Seaman, R.N.R.; when the “Iolaire” was wrecked he jumped into a small boat, but as it was likely to be swamped he regained the yacht and reached the shore in safety by means of the hawser. DONALD, Royal Marines; served over 20 years in the Royal Marines; was time-expired when war broke out, and immediately rejoined. (Sons of the late Mr Malcolm Macleod).

18 MACMILLAN—ALEXANDER, R.N.R. (Son of Mr Norman Macmillan).

MACDONALD—GEORGE, Sergt., 23rd Howitzer Battery, Canadian Field Artillery; died of gas poisoning in France, 23rd September, 1918; served for some years in the Glasgow and Canadian Police Forces; aged 30 years. MALCOLM, Canadians. HECTOR, Seaforth. (Sons of the late Mr John Macdonald).

19 MACDONALD—JOHN, Seaforths. JOHN MURDO, R.N.R. (Sons of the late Mr John Macdonald).

20 MACLEOD—DONALD, R.N.R. (Son of Mr John Macleod).

21 MONTGOMERY—JOHN, Camerons; wounded in action and on recovery, being time-expired, was discharged. Rejoined in the R.N.R. (Son of the late Mr James Montgomery).

21b MORRISON—DONALD, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers; killed in action in France, August, 1918; was previously in the R.N.R., but was discharged in ill-health; aged 23 years. (Only Son of Mr Donald Morrison).

22 FERGUSON—DONALD, K.O.S.B.; wounded. (Son of Mr Fergus Ferguson).

25 MACLEOD—JOHN, R.N.R.T.; for some time in the Camerons, which he relinquished owing to ill-health. Drowned in the “Iolaire” disaster; aged 24 years. MALCOLM, Camerons; wounded. RODERICK, Canadians; wounded. (Sons of Mr Colin Macleod).

27 MACLEOD—DONALD, Camerons; wounded four times and gassed. On the first occasion he was shot in both thighs while charging with his Company across “No Man’s Land,” and on the last, a piece of shrapnel penetrated his right wrist. Though he has somewhat regained his health and strength, it is feared that the power of his right hand has been lost permanently. PEGGIE, Clerkess, W.A.A.C. (Son and Daughter of Mr John Macleod).

Soval Lodge.

ROSS—ALEXANDER, Camerons; served many years previously in the Scots Guards.
BALALLAN SCHOOL DISTRICT.

Population last Census, 560 (Males, 263; Females, 297).

As almost three years of the Great War had elapsed before the writer was transferred to this School District it is feared full justice can hardly be given to all noteworthy cases. But what has been gleaned from local sources is herein set forth:—

Out of a population of 560 the number who saw service in the different theatres of war from this School District was 70, or 26.6 per cent. of males. 16 men fell, or 22.8 per cent. of those engaged. The first to fall was Pte. George MacKenzie, 46 Balallan, who was killed in action on 11th November, 1914.

Of the heroes who paid the supreme sacrifice perhaps one case stands out prominently amongst the others, in virtue of his comparative youth—that of Donald Sneddon, reared by his grandmother (Widow Marion Macleod, No. 39a) who was in the trenches at the astonishingly early age of 14 years! and paid the supreme sacrifice shortly after his fifteenth birthday!

Perhaps of all the district's cases of crushing losses (in point of number) that of the above Widow Marion Macleod, No. 39a, is pre-eminent—three sons and above grandson having fallen. It may be mentioned that on the last (and fourth) son joining the Colours the aged widow—totally blind—was left alone in the house.

In common with those of other districts several natives answered the "Call to Arms" from foreign lands—from Canada, South America, and New Zealand. One man, John Macdonald, son of Mr William Macdonald, No. 19, who was second manager of a farm in Rio Gallegos, is known to have sailed home in February, 1917 (in the s.s. "Vine Branch" of Sunderland), at his own expense, purposely to defend his Country, but unfortunately the ship went down in the Bay of Biscay on 11th April, 1917. He did his bit!

Of the medical profession 1 joined up—Dr K. Mackinnon, son of Mr Kenneth Mackinnon, Halfway House. Of the teaching profession 3 joined up—Lance-Corpl. Norman Mackinnon, Halfway House; Lieut. Malcolm A. Mackinnon, son of Mr Donald Mackinnon, No. 43, and Pte. Aulay Macleod, son of Mr John Macleod, No. 50. One teacher fell—Lce.-Corpl. Norman Mackinnon. There were three cases of exceptional hardship:—(1) Widow Marion Macleod (already mentioned); (2) Mr Donald Mackinnon, 43 Balallan, left alone—all three sons serving; (3) Pte. James Smith, 44 Balallan; had to leave house, property, cattle and sheep stock to the four winds of heaven.

To read the daily "war telegrams" was part of everybody's daily programme, and old and young alike got familiar with distant geographical names. The signing of the Armistice on 11th November, 1918, was a great relief. The villagers and school children contributed various sums of money to war charities. The Peace Celebrations (19th July, 1919), and the complete suspension of all our normal activities for the space of two minutes on 11th November, 1919, at 11 a.m.—with all that this involved—must have made a lasting impression on school children's minds.

"LOYAL LEWIS" ROLL OF HONOUR.

*Signaller Colin Smith, Seaforths, 27 Balallan; killed 28th June, 1918.

*C.S.M. D. Macdonald, 5 Balallan; killed 18th Sept., 1918.
The following were awarded the Mons Star:—Kenneth Macleod, 10 Balallan; Donald Kennedy, 29 do.; Angus Morrison, 41 do.; Donald Macaulay, 60 do.; John Mackenzie, 60 (died a prisoner—sent to next-of-kin); George Mackenzie (killed—sent to next-of-kin).

The tragic circumstances of the "Iolaire" disaster on the 1st January, 1919 (when hundreds of brave Lewismen met a cruel fate), claiming two victims from this village, may be more fittingly described in the words of the Lewis Gaelic Bard:

Se là bliadh' ur thug silleadh shuil
Trom thurs' air Eilean Leodhais
Cha be creach a h-aoa a bh'ann
Bho chean gu ceann bha bòrn
Na'm b'ann sa chath a bhiodh na Trèun
Le faomhar gheur nan dorn
Gu h-umhlachd hheiradh iad a' Namh
Ach Bas cha'n fhàighinn sinn fhàighinn sinn fosth'n.

MALCOLM A., Lieut., Gordons; was awarded the M.M., while a Sergt.-Major, for having, “on 9th April, 1917, when the battalion was advancing on the first objective, the Coy.-Sergt.-Major of the Company on the right was fatally wounded Sergt. Mackinnon was prompt in taking over his duties, and his alert action and decision resulted in the advance being continued without the slightest delay. Thereafter, throughout many days’ fighting, he continued to show the greatest coolness and courage, and as the two officers of the Company had been killed, his untiring work was of incalculable value. Apart from his unflagging energy, his personal example of courage and coolness was of the greatest assistance, and cannot be too highly recommended.”

KERSHADER SCHOOL DISTRICT.

(Habost, Kershader, Garyvard and Caversta.)

Population last Census, 366 (Males, 183; Females, 183).

On the outbreak of war in August, 1914, 41 men from this School District, which comprises the villages of Caverstay, Garyvard, Kershader, and Habost, were already attached to various units of the Services, and were immediately mobilised. Others began to join up with the first call for men by Lord Kitchener, and the number of men serving finally totalled 106. This is slightly over 30 per cent. of the population, and nearly 59 per cent. of the total male population. They were almost equally distributed between the land and sea forces, 51 of them being connected with the Navy and 55 with the Army.

They were drawn from various parts of the country and of the Empire. Several were Canadians, two came from Australia, and one from far New Zealand. One man travelled all the way from South America to join up. There was one man in the U.S. Navy, and another in the Canadian Navy.

They saw service in almost every theatre of operations on land and sea, in the battlefields of France and Flanders, in Gallipoli, in Salonica, in Mesopotamia and Syria. They took part in most of the Naval operations. The Dogger Bank, the fight of the Carmania, the battle of the Falklands, the Ostend and Zeebrugge operations, and the Dardanelles, to mention a few, are names that will conjure up stirring memories in the breasts of many of our sailors; and no less stirring are the memories of those who, by their unceasing vigilance, kept the sea routes open to our commerce amid the terrors and the hidden dangers of the mine and the submarine. What an entrancing tale each has to tell if space could but permit.

The list includes the names of many who received promotion, several being non-commissioned officers, mates, leading seamen and gunners, and one Warrant Officer, R.N. Two of the outstanding names on the list are Major Donald Macleod, and his brother Captain K. K. Macleod. The latter was awarded the Military Cross for the part he played in storming the Hohenzollern Redoubt. The wound he then received incapacitated him for further service, and thus a military career of great promise was prematurely brought to a close. Other decorations were the D.S.M. for Roderick Macdonald, 6 Kershader, for the sinking of a German submarine, and the R.R.C. for Sister Annabella N. Macleod, 5 Kershader, who saw a very great deal of service in the Casualty Clearing Stations in France. A number of men have a claim to the Mons Star and other war medals.

The number of fatalities was 17, being 16 per cent. of those serving, and the announcement of each was received with deep sorrow and sympathy by the whole community. They were all young and in their prime, and many of them were mere boys. Three of them were married, one of whom left a young family of eight, all of them below 16. Three men were lost in the ill-starred "Iolaire," on the dreadful morning of the 1st of January, 1919. These were Angus Montgomery, 2
Garyvard; Alex. Macleod, 1 Garyvard, and Angus Mackinnon, 4 Caverstay. Even then the list was not complete.
Another blow was yet to fall, for intimation was received by Mr Donald Macleod, 2 Habost, that his youngest son, Malcolm, who was then being expected home demobilised, was accidentally killed in Beja Hospital, Hungary, on 9th July, 1919. This was felt to be one of the most distressing fatalties of the war, and the hearts of all went out in sympathy to the bereaved family who had thus lost a second son in the war.

And what of those who were left at home—the fathers and mothers, the wives and brothers and sisters? Will the memory of those days ever depart from them? Can they ever erase from their memories the weary vigil, the long drawn out days and nights of anxiety and anguish, the fluctuating hopes and fears, and the hopes for ever abandoned? Truly their lot was none too easy to bear.

A. J. MACMILLAN.

A SOLDIER FAMILY.

Major Donald MacLeod, elder son of the late Mr Norman Macleod, Kershader, enlisted in the Army Service Corps on 21st March, 1885. He was promoted Warrant Officer in 1899, and to commissioned rank in 1909, and to the rank of Major in 1918. Major Macleod was on active service in South Africa during the Boer War, and subsequently served eighteen months there on foreign service.

Captain Kenneth Kennedy Macleod, M.C., half brother of Major Macleod, above, was born in 1873. He joined the 1st Seaforth Highlanders on 6th April, 1892, and was promoted Lance-Corporal before the end of the same year. He was promoted Corporal in 1894; Sergt., 1897; Colour-Sergeant, 1901; Warrant Officer, 1911; Lieutenant and Quarter-master on 24th August, 1914; and Captain (commanding a Company) on 10th October, 1914. Captain Macleod served in Crete during the disturbance of 1897-1898, and afterwards was five years in Egypt. He was through the Sudan Campaign of 1898, and took part in the storming of the Zareba on the Atbara. After a year’s service in India he returned home in 1904 and joined the Permanent Staff of the 3rd Seaforth Highlanders, on which he served till the outbreak of war in August, 1914, when he was promoted Lieutenant and Quarter-master to the 7th Seaforths. He commanded B Company of the 7th Seaforths in the attack on the Hohenzollern Redoubt on 25th September, 1915, leading his men with conspicuous gallantry.

Wounded above the left elbow by a bullet which passed through the arm and entered above the left hip (where it is still lodged), he continued to lead his men until struck down by a rifle bullet which passed through his head, entering an inch behind the right eye, and coming out a little lower on the left side. He lay out in the rain for twelve hours before he was accidentally found by two Camerons, who carried him to the dressing station. For his gallantry and devotion to duty on this occasion he was awarded the Military Cross. Very early in his military career he proved himself a master marksman, putting up the highest score on record in his recruit’s course. He held the Championship of Egypt and the Mediterranean in 1901, and afterwards won many important competitions in India and at home. He held the Scottish Army Championship in 1912, and was the best shot in the 7th Seaforths at Borden in 1915. He acted as a sniper in France, using the telescopic-sighted rifle with great effect, to the annoyance of the Bosches. His shooting trophies comprise six gold and two silver medals, besides spoons and cups. He was not only considered one of the best shots, but also one of the best instructors in the British Army, although not a great believer in the ‘pace stick.’ His decorations are—the British Sudan Medal, with clasp; the Medal for Long Service and Good Conduct, the King George Coronation Medal, and the Military Cross.
Major Norman George Morrison Macleod, son of Major Donald Macleod, above, was born at Stornoway in July, 1891. After a few years in the Education Department of the Civil Service he joined the 1st Gordon Highlanders as a private on 9th September, 1909. On the 9th December, 1912, he was gazetted 2nd Lieutenant to the 2nd South Lancashire Regiment, but resigned his commission on 9th July, 1913, to enter on a commercial career in Canada. On the outbreak of war in August, 1914, he mobilised as Lieutenant with the 90th Winnipeg Rifles, with whom he proceeded to France in February, 1915, and was promoted Captain on 24th April. For his conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in the fighting of 24th April, 1915, and for carrying important messages out of the trenches in daylight, Lieut. Macleod was awarded the Military Cross and appointed Captain. On the 24th April, when the Germans, under a cloud of poisonous gases, attacked and broke the Allied lines, Captain Macleod with his platoon seized and occupied a piece of trench from which the battalion on their left had been driven. This trench was of the utmost importance, being on the extreme left of the unbroken portion of the British line. As soon as Captain Macleod’s platoon had fought their way sufficiently far down the trench to adequately protect the battalion’s flank, they erected a barricade between themselves and the Germans, who still occupied a portion of the trench. They held the position tenaciously for eleven hours till definitely ordered to retire. This gallant soldier, who later was appointed Major, was killed in the fighting between 24th and 27th September, 1916, aged 25 years.

THE sons of Park hold a proud position in the annals of the Great War. In the far-flung battle line were to be found gallant lads from the isolated villages of Marvig and Calbost. Old boys were there also from Australia, Chili, America, and one brave Canadian, Alick Morrison, 20 Marvig, remains at rest on a hard-won field. Prompt to answer the call, the first great shock of arms found them ready, and Mons medals are now no rarity in the above villages. Among the earliest to give up their lives were Rod. Kennedy (Murdo), Neil Morrison (John), and Dugald Kennedy (Donald). In less stirring times these brave boys would have been at school, but two of them sailed away in the “Clan Macnaughton” and now sleep in the grey waters of the North Sea. Rod. Kennedy was the son of an old warrior, and died for home and country on a well-fought field. Thus in the spirit of Lewismen, fathers, sons and brothers went forth to face the foe, while all the world wondered. What of the homes? During these dreaded years 1914-1918 there was that quiet resignation to God’s will, which has ever been the birthright of Lewis maids and mothers. Anxiety there certainly was, when news of battle came, and when wounded heroes paid a flying visit to their homes they were received with a deep, quiet joy which was sometimes pathetic. The sparkling eye of the mother, of the sister, of a loved one, dimmed for a moment by tears, spoke volumes, but there was no holding back. Duty called and all obeyed.

On the School Roll of Honour there are 70 names placed as follows:—

R.N.R. and other sea units—43.

Seaforth and other land units—27.

The Regiments represented were—Seaforths, 6; Camerons, 5; Gordons, 1; Canadians, 6; Australians, 1; Chili, 1; American Navy, 1; A. & S. Highlanders, 1; Life Guards, 1; Labour Corps, 3; Scottish Rifles, 1.

Among the soldiers 12 were wounded, some three times, and 4 lost their lives, while one is reported missing, Rod. Finlayson (Roshen), now presumed dead.

Among the sailors 5 brave lads lost their lives at sea. Three spent the long years in Holland. One remained all the time in Germany, and one, Ian (Alick) Mackenzie, went down with the “Tolairse.” Another Marvig lad, Rod. Finlayson, was on board that ill-fated ship, but he escaped. While death and wounds came to some the honours of war were not awanting among the gallant band of lads belonging to Planasker.

Sergt. Murdo Macfarlane, 10 Marvig, and C.S.M. Murdo Morrison, 9 Calbost, both won the Military Medal for conspicuous bravery in the field.
Probably no other men since the Crusades of old have run such a gamut

"...of most disastrous chances;
Of moving accidents by flood and field;
Of hairbreadth 'scapes i' the imminent deadly breach
Of being taken by the insolent foe."

Prompt to the call of duty they faced the foe; they prevailed, and some sleep away from home.

They quit them like heroes and... every man a King.

KENNEDY—MURDO, Orinsay Farm, R.N.R.
MAJOR ANGUS MACMILLAN, D.S.O., M.C., son of the late Mr. Kenneth Macmillan, Lemreway, enlisted as a private in the 2nd Batt. Seaforth Highlanders on 5th November, 1904. In August, 1911, when he held the rank of Sergeant, he purchased his discharge to the Army Reserve. On mobilisation in 1914, he immediately rejoined, and was posted to the 7th Battalion of the Seaforths as Company Quartermaster Sergeant. With that unit he went to France in May, 1915. As Company Sergeant-Major he took part in the battle of Loos, after the first attack on the 25th September, 1915. On 12th March, 1916, he was commissioned on the field, and two months later was appointed Acting Captain. After the battle of the Somme on 12th October, 1916, he was appointed Temporary Captain and awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his Company in the attack with great courage and determination, himself returning to Battalion Headquarters under very heavy fire to report the situation. Later he established a good trench in a forward position. In April, 1917, he was mentioned in despatches for services at the Battle of Arras. In the summer of 1918, in the fighting south of Soissons, where a Scottish Division formed part of General Mangin's 10th French Army, Captain Macmillan so distinguished himself that on 28th July at Buzancy he was awarded the Distinguished Service Order, the Legion of Honour and the Croix de Guerre (with palm). By the French he was acclaimed "the hero of Buzancy."

On a subsequent occasion he was again mentioned in despatches, and on 12th November, 1918, he was appointed Temporary Major, which rank he held till August, 1919, when, on the Service Battalions being disbanded, he reverted to his substantive rank of Lieutenant and rejoined his depot at Fort George.

GLASGOW LEWISMEN IN THE GREAT WAR.
Glasgow Lewismen in the Great War.

The request which the publisher of "Loyal Lewis" has done the writer the honour to make, to contribute the following Chapter to this interesting volume, is one that he feels constrained to comply with so far as that lies in his power—not, however, without considerable diffidence and a profound consciousness of inability to discharge the task with that exhaustive completeness which a subject of so great importance admittedly demands. But there are many influences which prompt him to undertake a duty of this nature, and it may not be amiss, at the outset, to mention a few of the more immediate reasons which (despite difficulties) render the task a not uncongenial one.

The connection existing between the Island of Lewis and the great city of Glasgow—brought about partly through commercial relations, but in infinitely greater measure by reason of the very considerable number of natives of the island who have made Clydeside the "land of their adoption"—is of so firmly established a nature that a book such as this would be obviously incomplete if within its pages the reader failed to find a record, albeit brief, disconnected and imperfect, of the part taken by Glasgow sons of Eilean-an-Phraoich in the greatest War of which this world has hitherto been the theatre.

It would be superfluous, at this time of day, to make any lengthy reference to the loyalty and patriotism of Lewis men and women; but it may be pertinent to observe that the characteristics which have always been the "hall mark" of dwellers in that Western Isle are so thoroughly implanted in the very marrow of the people that these characteristics continue to manifest themselves with undiminished vigour in descendants of Lewismen wheresoever they may happen to be. And so it follows, as a natural corollary, that we find sons and grandsons (many of whom, it may be, know the island but by name) following with resolute determination and commendable fidelity in the footsteps of their ancestors, more especially in the region of naval and military tradition and devotion to King and Country. The influence born of the historic renown of those northern latitudes is undoubtedly powerful. Despite the disturbing elements associated with a city life, the spirit begotten of their fathers, lying dormant within, re-kindles with magic force at the call of danger, thus recalling to mind the beacon fire on the mountain tops of Scotia that awoke the clansmen to battle in the centuries long ago. That spirit has never failed the Highlanders; it never will fail them, for the reputation and the tradition of their fathers are among the proudest and most cherished possessions of those in whose veins courses the blood of valiant men who seem to have no consciousness of danger or of the perils of the field of battle, and in whose vocabulary the word "defeat" may be searched for in vain.

It will, perhaps, be of interest to coming generations to read of the steps generally adopted in Glasgow (as in other large centres) on the outbreak of the Great War, in the way of obtaining recruits for our Army and Navy, more-especially as it was through the channel thus afforded that thousands of young Highlanders found their way into the ranks of the "Soldiers of the King"; and as it was the writer’s privilege—by no means a sinecure task—to take an active part in the work of a Recruiting Establishment, from practically the commencement of the War, he will very briefly make general mention of the work.

That work was carried on right through what then seemed interminable years, as the fortunes of war swayed hither and thither on the vast battle-fronts, until, with the introduction, after a period of some three years, of an altered regime, the exigencies of the situation no longer necessitated these voluntary agencies for swelling the ranks of the Army and Navy.

From the early years of the opening of the twentieth century, students of political history who followed with observant vision the signs of the times, could discern—despite feigned protestations of amity and goodwill—the gathering war-clouds lowering on the horizon of central Europe; just as we in the Highlands have so often seen, on a summer’s day, the ominous thunder-clouds rolling along with increasing blackness—dark almost as Erebus—the atmosphere rendered sultry and oppressive by the electric fluid with which it is heavily charged—the weightiness becoming ever more tense, until, like "a bolt from the blue," the very gates of elemental fury seem to open, and the pent-up storm bursts forth in awesome grandeur and almost terrifying intensity, and the song of the birds becomes suddenly hushed, as its authors seek refuge amid the seclusion of leafy bowers. Somewhat akin to this did the great war-cloud burst upon the world on that fateful Fourth of August, 1914, which for over four and a quarter long years raged with unprecedented fierceness and severity over so great a part of the Continent of Europe. And with the bursting of that war-cloud the mirthful jovis to which we had all become accustomed as part of the daily life, and the very song and laughter of the children seemed to become suddenly hushed until, amid increasing bereavements and tragedies, we had forgotten the existence of such pleasures. But, through it all, the dogged resoluteness, and pluck, and perseverance of our men and women were never allowed to fail. That the task which Britain had to face was transcendentally the greatest in a long and illustrious history was at once recognised; and no time was lost in setting the necessary machinery of organisation in motion, with a view to increasing the ranks of our fighting forces. Party politics were, happily, laid aside, as the warrior denudes himself of all trammelling adornments when entering the arena where his prowess is to be put to the test: the homeland was in danger, and—to the lasting credit of every true Scotsman and patriotic Briton be it said—when the common enemy is without the gate, the powerful tie of kindred and of blood rises superior to the inane barriers which have been wont to separate us as men and brothers amid the maelstrom of party strife that has too often been looked upon with unduly magnified and distorted vision. The reader will, let us hope, pardon this slight digression, and we must hasten to dismiss a subject extraneous to the scope of this chapter, justification for the passing mention of which is but to emphasise how ready we Britons are to put country before personal foibles when danger to the Empire looms ahead.

Illustrating the axiom which has just been referred to, the Unionist and Liberal Associations of the College Division of Glasgow (and this is, as already stated, but an example of what was done throughout the City) joined forces, and the Unionist Rooms in New City Road were, on 10th August, 1914—only six days after hostilities commenced—opened as a recruiting centre. So widespread have been the ramifications of the Great War—leaving practically not a home circle untouched in the British Isles—and so familiar are the details of the work carried on at recruiting depots to almost all readers of this publication—so far as the present generation is concerned—that any lengthy reference to that work would not be dis-similar to gilding refined gold or showing a Lewis Naval Reserveman how to handle an oar! Suffice it then to say that from early morning till late in the evening, day in and day out, we had a constant stream of the flower of our young manhood pouring into the recruiting office, eager to give their services, and, if need be, their lives, in defence of the glorious Empire whose traditions they almost worshipped. Strange, is it not, that youths of little more than school age, many of whom probably could not tell which was the “breech” end of a rifle barrel, and who read from day to day in the Press of the death in battle of friends of their own, should seem so fearless, and so eager to face the terrors of that grim arena? Not a bit of it! for behind them was the tradition of their fathers, and the example of the men by whose indomitable courage, loyalty and devotion this Empire had been built up; and the proud and glorious record which had been bequeathed to us was not to suffer dishonour at the hands of the twentieth century Highlander.

Whether or not it leaked out that this particular depot had the assistance of Highlanders (including Lewismen) besides the writer, it is difficult to say, but it is pleasant to record the fact that a very great proportion of the young men who were proud to take the oath of allegiance to his Majesty King George the Fifth hailed from the Highlands—a goodly number of them from the principal isle of the Hebrides. By far the greater number of the men enlisted at this section expressed a preference for serving in Highland Regiments—once again illustrating the old axiom of “shoulde to shoulder” —and, in so far as it was possible to do so, their desires were cordially endorsed by the recruiting staff. Many, very naturally, enrolled in the Navy, having been, metaphorically, born “on the sea.” In the early stages of the war, there was little or no difficulty in conceding the very natural wishes of the men; but, as time wore on, and the various localities, like the glens and straths and bays and loch-sides, became demended of young manhood, and the ranks of the Highland Regiments swelled to such an extent that battalion after battalion had to be added, a goodly number of Highlanders and Islanders had no option but to enrol themselves in the ranks of Lowland and English Regiments. In this connection it is safe to hazard the remark that the infusion of Highland blood into Battalions of soldiers across the Border was by no means to the disadvantage of the latter. One thing at least is certain, that throughout the whole course of the war, where the fight was hottest and the battle raged fiercest, and where almost superhuman obstacles had to be overcome, there our Highland heroes were to be found. Let it be emphatically clear that no reflection on any territorial division of the British Army is implied; but it is now matter of history that of all the myriad forces they had to encounter on the field of foray none struck terror into the — (one had almost written hearts, but it would be a misnomer!)—none struck terror into the carcases of the once arrogant, boastful Hun like that engendered by finding themselves “up against” the Highlander.

An incident illustrative of this statement is worthy of being recorded in this book. It was related by that gallant and distinguished soldier, Brigadier-General Sir Ian Hamilton on the occasion of his taking part in a special service in the now historic Highlanders’ Memorial Church, Glasgow, when, along with other commemorative emblems, the Shield of Arms of His Majesty the King was presented and dedicated. Sir Ian, after extolling the gallant exploits of the immortal 51st Division, which, as the reader knows, was mainly composed of Highland Regiments, told how one day German airmen flying over the trenches occupied by that Division, of whose prowess the enemy had had abundant demonstration in numerous encounters, dropped the message: —

“Good Old 51st, Sticking it Still.”

Verily, as Sir Ian Hamilton remarked, no finer or higher compliment could ever come from an unwilling enemy. In all the volumes written concerning the Great War the most gifted pen of litterateur or historian can indite nothing finer than that spontaneous tribute from the foe.

As time went on, and our Registers rapidly grew from hundreds into thousands, and as one noted those unmistakeable characteristics of the Highlander—chivalry, patriotism and devotion—one felt how fitting were the words in Mitchell’s admirable History of Ancient Scotland where, writing of the far away days of the year 86 A.D., he refers to the then inhabitants of northern Scotland flocking to the colours thus:

“From the western sea-board and from the farthest north; from the sheltered glen; from far-extending strath, and from the margin of the lonely loch, the hardy sons of the North had rallied to the battle for Freedom, every man of them eager to measure swords with the proud legionaries of Rome in defence of Liberty’s sacred cause.”
And when, but a few weeks later, many of these grand young fellows looked in to say "Soraidh slan leibh" ere crossing the Channel to prove their mettle at close quarters with the legionaries of the Hun, one could imagine, as one looked with pride on their sturdy, well-set-up figures, as if they had come fresh from listening to that historic appeal of the great Tacitus—one of the most soul-stirring appeals on behalf of Liberty that probably was ever penned—concluding with the inspiring counsel—

"As, therefore, you advance to battle, look back upon your ancestors, look forward to your posterity."

How closely the spirit of that appeal was followed by the many sons of Lewis who sacrificed comfort, if not, indeed, comparative luxury, in this great City, as elsewhere, is eloquently testified by the brief record which is contained in the following pages.

Before passing to the actual records of service, it may be permissible to make a few general observations. First and foremost, what impressed one perhaps more than anything else was the splendid response made by Lewis to the call for men for the Army, Navy and Auxiliary Forces; indeed, the same may be said of the whole Highlands. One can well imagine with what literal truth it could, during the latter years of the awful struggle, be said that no man between the ages of sixteen and sixty was to be found in great stretches of Tir-nam-Beann, nan Gleann, ’s nan Gaisgeach. And when it has to be recorded that in the recruiting office with which the writer had the pleasure of being associated, the number that passed through to the ranks exceeded 7000, and that—to their own keen disappointment—a number totalling not very far short of half that figure who volunteered for enlistment had perforce to be "turned down," the wonder is not that Britain's legions numbered such a mighty host but that these numbers were not even exceeded.

Another distinctive feature was the fine spirit of camaraderie which seemed spontaneously to spring up between those who had been keen rivals in separate political camps in what we now term "pre-war" days. Friendships thus formed are amongst one's treasured memories of a time of stress and struggle, and they will certainly continue while the lamp of life emits the ray of light which guides our path along the course which, alas! must one day hasten to a close. And among the many "landmarks" on life's journey of vicissitudes, those of the years 1914-1918—enriched and mellowed by the experiences and sympathies thus gained—are certainly carven the deepest.

But we must not overtax the patience of the reader, or dwell on the subject, despite its alluring interest, else, mayhap, we are accused of pursuing it to the point of monotony. In any event, the circumscribed power of our pen reminds us that the prologue must here end, and we shall now proceed to narrate what are but a very few examples, gleaned from the cases of natives or sons of natives of the Island of Lewis, and get a fleeting glimpse of their part in the Great War. The alphabetical order of surnames has been chosen as that most suitable for the task before us; for we realise, as we are sure the reader will, that it would be invidious even to attempt anything in the nature of priority. After all, we are dealing with the island as a unit, and that section of its people which is more particularly the object of our contribution, as one family, typical of the grand old motto:

"Na Gaidheil ri Guallaibh a Cheile."

If the writer ventures, in the course of setting down the following names, to introduce an occasional note concerning the distinctions and traditions of some of the Clans, let it not for a moment be surmised that the object is any other than that of showing how those distinguishing qualities of the several branches of our Highland clansmen were all blended together into one united whole (in the unprecedented period under review), in the sacred cause of that Liberty and of that Freedom under which this Empire of Britain stands pre-eminent and incomparable as the pioneer of civilisation and of progress.

Passing, then, from this somewhat ample "preamble," the first name we have to record is that of:

CHAPMAN—DONALD, Lieut., 5th Scottish Rifles. This soldier's father belongs to Sandwick, while his mother is from Vatisker, in Back district. Joined as a private in 1915. Wounded in France 26th September, 1917.
It seems a fitting coincidence that the first Lewisman to be here named should have risen to the distinction of Lieutenant.

Graham—John, Clydebank, Glasgow; native of Braebhig, Vatisker, Back. Joined 6th Argyll & Sutherlands in April, 1917; transferred to 4th Seaforths; served in France and Belgium.

Graham—Alexander, 4th Seaforths; son of Murdo Graham, 72 Cathedral Street, Glasgow, a native of Vatisker, Back. Joining in February, 1915, this young soldier reached the field of battle only six weeks after enlistment. Wounded at Festubert in May, 1915; and again by gas-shell at High Wood, 27th July, 1916; died in field hospital. Left a widow and five children.

Here we have a typical example of the "chivalrous and important part" for which the "gallant Graham"s are noted in Scottish History.

Macarthur—John, H.L.I.; a native of Carloway. Joined in 1914. Had previous service in Crete, Egypt, the Soudan, and South Africa.

Macarthur—Kenneth, Seaforths; native of Carloway. Joined in 1914; killed in France.

Two excellent specimens of the British soldier. Despite his veteran service, John Macarthur proved his title to the Clan Motto—"Fide et opera"; while his kinsman earned the highest motto of all—"Faithful unto Death."

Macdonald—Kenneth, H.M.S. "Emperor of India"; native of Carloway; joined in 1914.

It is noteworthy that the men serving on this ship were winners of the Challenge Cup, competed for by the whole Fleet. A gallant sailor of the Clan of whom the celebrated Ardnamurchan Bard sang:—

"Fresh honours ever gaining, disclaiming servility, Attacks can never move them but prove their stability."

Macfarlane—Donald, Harland St., Glasgow. Coy.-Sergt.-Major and ex-Sergt. of 1st Seaforths, Native of Marvig, Lochs. Had 13 years service when he joined up in 1914, and served on 14th Batt., Training Staff.

Worthy representatives of a Clan who, in the days of Queen Mary and Langside, are renowned as being found "in the hottest brunt of the fight."

MacGregor—Duncan, son of Murdo MacGregor, 13 Edington St., Glasgow. Killed in France.

In giving his life on the field of battle, this soldier hero bravely upheld the reputation of his Clan for "remarkable loyalty and inflexible fidelity."

Mackay—Donald, R.E., son of Malcolm Mackay, 13 Edington St., Glasgow. Parents belong to Carloway. He enlisted in 1916 on attaining the age of 18.

Mackay—John, H.M.S. "Apollo." Native of Carloway. Joined in 1915. Was then a Divinity student in Glasgow University.

Mackay—Malcolm, A.S.C., 13 Edington St., Glasgow. Native of Garenin, Carloway. Enlisted in 1915. Served in France. These Clansmen right well sustained their motto "Manu Forti"; the Clan repute for "deeds of valour" suffered no diminution in the Great War.

The maxim of this Clan, that "a Maclean should never turn his back on the foe," has always characterised their part in war; while their war-cry, "Beatha no Bas," has been at all times worthy upheld.

Macleod—Angus, D.C.M., Seaforths. A native of Carloway. Awarded the D.C.M. for exceptional gallantry under fire.

Macleod—David Finlay, second son of Mr Neil M. Macleod, 24 Barrington Drive, Glasgow, and grandson of the late Mr Finlay Macleod, at one time merchant, Bernera, Lewis. Mobilised 4th Aug., 1914, 5th (Cameronians) Scottish Rifles: embarked for France 4th Nov.; served throughout until severely wounded in action at Cambria, 27th March, 1916. After six months' hospital treatment, rejoined his battalion for home service, afterwards transferred to the Seaforths (Fort-George), thence Labour Corps, and latterly to the Edinburgh R.E., Forth Defence; demobilised 5th March, 1919.

Macleod—Duncan, 3rd Seaforths, son of the late Neil Macleod, 23 Elder Street, Govan. Called up on outbreak of hostilities. Served in France, and was discharged on account of wounds. His parents belong to Carloway.
MACLEOD—JAMES REID WILSON, eldest son of Mr Neil M. Macleod, 24 Barrington Drive, Glasgow, and grandson of the late Mr Finlay Macleod, Bernera, Lewis. Mobilised 4th Aug., 1914, Glasgow Highlanders; afterwards retained in the Post Office service. At a later period he enlisted in 5th (Camerons) Scottish Rifles; went to France in July, 1916, and was transferred to the 9th (Kitchener) Battalion. Was engaged in continuous fighting throughout. Killed in action, 23rd March, 1918, at St. Quinten.

Yet another instance of the appalling inhumanity of the Huns.

It is naturally difficult for a Clansman to record in writing anything concerning his own Clan; and how much more delicate is the writer's position where members of his own family circle are concerned? But surely there can be no accusation, either of undue reserve on the one hand, or pretentious assurance on the other, if one quotes the historian who writes of the annals of the Clan as “replete with stirring and romantic incident,” and if one ventures here to record that their motto, “Hold Fast,” was creditably sustained in the stupendous struggle during which many of the Clan made the supreme sacrifice.

MACPHERSON—DUNCAN, H.M.S. “Triumph.” A native of Carloway. Joined the Navy in 1914. Belongs to a Lewis race whose record may well be said to be the name of the ship on which he served.

MACRAE—ROBERT, 28 Maclean St., Plantation, Glasgow. Enlisted in the Royal Highlanders (Black Watch) in 1915, and served in France. His mother is a native of Marvig, Lochs.

In the Great War the Macraes well merited the eulogium passed by the historian on a distinguished Clansman who, in the Battle of Strathconan, “acquitted himself with admirable bravery.”

MORRISON—GEORGE, Royal Navy. A native of Carloway; survivor of the “Tolique” disaster.

MORRISON—MALCOLM, 83 Stratford St., Maryhill, Glasgow. Served in Egypt, Palestine, and France. Is in the teaching profession.

The history of the Ness district is rich in the traditions of the Morrisons. The experience of the first-named concerns a red-letter day in Lewis history, which is briefly referred to towards the end of this chapter.

MURRAY—A. J., Marine Engineer, Glasgow; younger son of Mrs Murray, 25 Newton, Stornoway. Joined up 4th August, 1914; drafted to the Mediterranean shortly afterwards, thence to home waters. In June, 1916, was again transferred to foreign service, and in the “Fox,” took part in the bombardment of Gaza and other actions in the East. Demobilised in February, 1919.

PATerson—Murdo, 15th H.L.I. A native of Carloway. Killed in France only a few days before the Armistice. Two sons of this family made the supreme sacrifice.

Here we have a notable example, among very many, where the field of battle made more than one irreparable break in the family circle.

STEWARD—MURDO, Sapper, 26th Field Coy., R.E. Son of George Stewart, 31 Crossburn St., Glasgow (a native of Coll, Back). Enlisted in March, 1915. Served in France and Belgium, finishing up with the Army of Occupation in Germany.

No name in Scottish history figures more prominently than that of the Stewarts; and the soldier last named is a typical example of the many Scotsmen who came across thousands of miles of ocean to fight in defence of their native land.

THOMSON—ALEXANDER, T., M.C., D.C.M., 2nd Lieut., Seaforth's (T.F.). Son of Mr James Thomson, merchant, Tong. Teacher in Glasgow; enlisted early in the war, and went to France in October, 1914. This gallant soldier was mentioned in the first edition of “Loyal Lewis” as having won the D.C.M., while still a Private, “for conspicuous gallantry on March, 1915, in bringing a wounded man, under heavy fire, a distance of 40 yards into cover, the enemy being only 200 yards away.”

Later this brave Leodhasach was promoted to 2nd Lieut., and won that honoured distinction, the Military Cross, when, in charge of a Royal Engineers detachment, he successfully blew up a house from which an enemy machine-gun team was harassing our troops. The “London Gazette” notice says:—“He showed splendid leadership, energy, and courage throughout the operations, and rendered invaluable service.”—15th October, 1918.

It would again seem most fitting that our list should conclude with the name of so distinguished a soldier, whose gallantry brought him such coveted distinctions.

The foregoing is but a fragmentary record of the many sons of Lewis who fought for King and Country during those trying years throughout which the war-cloud hung like a dark pall over the land. One would fain have wished to include the name of every serving soldier and sailor, but the impossibility of such a task will be obvious to the reader. That being so, let no Lewisman who has worn the King’s uniform, or the kinsfolk of any soldier or sailor, in the mournful words of MacCrimmon’s Lament:

“Nach till gu brath gu latha na Cruinne,” experience any feeling of disappointment because of the omission of their names from the list; for this humble tribute is penned not to extol or eulogise any single individual. Its boundary is the sea-girt shores of beloved Eilean-an-Ehdroich, and that queen of the Hebridean isles nestling in the lap of Loch Roag; and the homage desired to be paid is to all who are proud to claim that northern clime as the land of their fathers.

To those whose good fortune it has been to weather the storm and return safely to port, with (to use a nautical metaphor) rigging intact and gear undamaged, the writer would offer congratulations and good wishes not less fervent than the welcome which greeted their return, bearing the laurels of victory, to the home circle, for the preservation of which they courageously went forth to war.

To those less fortunate amid the dangers of the battlefield, whose indomitable pluck and endurance enabled them to survive the fury of the tempest of war, although, alas! with shattered nerve and broken limb, and whose honourable scars, sustained in unselfish devotion to the cause they had sworn to defend, they will carry through the remainder of life’s fateful journey, would he extend unstinted praise, sympathetic good wishes and the earnest hope that the ravages of the dread theatre of hostilities may be equitably compensated for by admiring kinsfolk and a grateful nation alike.

To the glorious dead who, at the cost of their life-blood, kept unfurled and unstained that Banner of Liberty and Freedom under which our Empire has become great and prosperous, and whose supreme sacrifice on the gory field of battle, and amid the hidden dangers lurking beneath the waves of ocean, has left irreparable blanks in many a home circle

“In strath and glen, and street and lane”

what adequate or fitting tribute can one pay? Suffice it to say, when power of pen is so limited, that the passing of those noble soldiers and sailors to the Great Beyond proved them steadfast to the proud traditions of the Highland Regiments, and added to the already glorious record of our beloved Tirnam-Beann an imperishable lustre destined to shine in intensified radiance with the passing of the years:

Leal hearts of Scotland can never forget them,
Mournful the dirge on Lewis’ grey shore;
Loyal to King and to Country, they earned Garland of glory that fades nevermore.

There are many outstanding events connected with the Great War of which one feels tempted to write at a time like this; many incidents relevant to the subject-matter of this publication, but the risk of trespassing beyond the latitude allowed by the Publisher, must be guarded against. One event, however, of transcendent import to Lewis, we may be allowed to make brief reference to in concluding this chapter; and the reader will have accurately anticipated that our reference is to that appalling disaster of which the shores of the island was the tragic scene in the opening hours of the year 1919, when the disaster to the “Tolairne” carried so many brave sons of Lewis to their doom, and overwhelmed the island in scenes of universal grief and mourning, without precedent in its long annals. That inscrutable tragedy is graphically dealt with by the Publisher in another part of this volume, and our special reason for making mention of it in this chapter is to record amid the varied happenings, calamities, and catastrophes which marked the course of the War, two occurrences in particular stand out pre-eminently as having made a profound impression on this great City of Glasgow. The first was the appalling crime—inhuman in its brutality and savage in its ruthlessness—which sent the “Lusitania” to the depths of the ocean, involving the cruel murder of so great a number of defenceless women and helpless children. The other event was that poignantly sad calamity which overtook the ill-fated “Tolairne” when, laden with a crew of human souls, almost touching the very threshold of their homes, she met so cruel a fate on the jagged rocks of the “Beasts of Holm,” causing scores upon scores of wives and children who had such joyful hopes of welcoming home husband and father on the first morning of a New Year, to awake up widowed and orphaned. Not alone those having kinship with the Lews, but every human heart in Glasgow was thrilled to the depths by this crowning calamity, surrounded as it was by circumstances which increased its pathos beyond the power of language to express. Those bereft by the disaster were indeed stricken sore; in their case there was not even the relieving feature of that indefinable pride which, despite the loss of a loved one on the field of battle, affords a mysterious consolation to hearts bowed down in sorrow by the death of those near and dear to them.

But Time, the great healer, and that indomitable courage which our womankind so grandly display—

"When the storms of adversity blow," sustain alike the grief-stricken through the darkest and most difficult periods—and for the possession of that admirable trait, we are justly proud of our women folk.

A word in conclusion. At the annual meeting of the Glasgow Lewis and Harris Association last November, the genial and esteemed proprietor of the island—Lord Leverhulme—made fitting reference to the Lewisman’s love for his native soil—a devotion which his Lordship very properly defined as second to none in the world. We Lewismen whose lot happens to be cast in various parts of the world realise perhaps even more keenly than those who dwell in the island how very true this assertion is. The tragedies and the victories of the Great War have but intensified that passionate devotion, and it is the fervent hope and the sincerest wish of the writer that, whatever the future may have in store, every son and daughter of Lewis may be found taking—with credit to themselves and to the Empire to which they are so loyal—a worthy part in all that appertains to the well-being of mankind.

NEIL M. MACLEOD.
THE "IOLAIRE" DISASTER.

[1st JANUARY, 1919.]
CROWNING SORROW OF THE WAR.

"Toll for the Brave—
The Brave! that are no more:
All Sunk beneath the Wave,
Fast by their native Shore."

THE overwhelming catastrophe of 1st January, 1919, which plunged Lewis into bitterest sorrow, sent a thrill of horror and a wave of sympathy throughout the English-speaking world. Apart from the great loss of life, the whole surrounding circumstances—the place, the time, the season, the mystery as to the cause of the disaster—were calculated to touch a responsive chord in every feeling heart, as was shown by the generous contributions which poured into the Relief Fund from all parts of the home country and from the most distant colonies and dependency of the Empire. Among the first messages of sympathy received were those from their Majesties the King and Queen, and Queen Alexandra.

As the foregoing pages of this memorial volume amply testify, the Island of Lewis had a record for war service excelled by no part of the King’s Dominions, and—in proportion to population—equalled by few. For the four and a half years of war, Death’s messenger had been no stranger in the homes of Lewis, for hundreds of our gallant Islesmen had fallen on battlefields in foreign lands or found their last resting place in the silent depths of war-swept seas. But the Armistice was signed and the perils of war were past when the crowning sorrow fell on Lewis. It was New Year’s Eve, too, and the whole ship’s company, in festive mood, were homeward bound for the glad re-union so long and so lovingly anticipated, and well they knew how eagerly their homecoming was awaited and what preparations were even then being made to welcome them. All this, only to be shipwrecked at the very entrance to Stornoway Harbour with appalling loss of life. What a tragedy!

The following account of the great disaster is taken from the columns of the Stornoway Gazette:

No one now alive in Lewis can ever forget the 1st of January, 1919, and future generations will speak of it as the blackest day in the history of the island, for on it 200 of our bravest and best perished on the very threshold of their homes under the most tragic circumstances.

The terrible disaster at Holm on New Year’s morning has plunged every home and every heart in Lewis into grief unutterable. Language cannot express the anguish, the desolation, the despair which this awful catastrophe has inflicted. One thinks of the wide circle of blood relations affected by the loss of even one of the gallant lads, and imagination sees these circles multiplied by the number of the dead, overlapping and overlapping each other till the whole island—every hearth and home in it—is shrouded in deepest gloom.

All the island’s war losses of the past four cruel years—although these number fully four times the death roll of New Year’s Day morning—are not comparable to this unspeakable calamity. The black tragedy has not a redeeming feature. The surrounding circumstances but add to the horror of it. Some of these circumstances will form the subject of the searching and impartial inquiry which is being called for, and THEREON.

THEREON dwells a wife by the Northern Gate,
And a careworn wife is she;
She breeds a breed o' rovin' men
And casts them over sea.

And some are drowned in deep water
And some in sight o' shore,
And word goes back to the weary wife,
And ever she sends more.

And some return by failing light,
And some in waking dream,
For she hears the heels of the dripping ghosts
That ride the rough roof-beam.

Home, they come home from all the ports,
The living and the dead;
The good wife's sons come home again
For her blessing on their head!

CROWNING SORROW OF THE WAR. 313

which must be held, though no amount of investigation can give Lewis back her dead.

Other circumstances having no relation to the cause of the disaster add poignancy to it. For over four years, on all the seven seas, many of the men so suddenly hurled to their doom had braved the elements in defence of Liberty and Right. And not only the old perils of the deep, but all the new infernal inventions of man for the destruction of human life—the floating mine, the cowardly submarine, the deadly torpedo. Not a few of them had suffered shipwreck time and again during the war, but always they escaped. And now with all these perils past, and the peace and comfort and liberty so well earned in prospect, they come home only to be cruelly done to death within twenty yards of shore and at the very entrance to Stornoway harbour!

Lewis, God knows, had already had more than her fair share of the losses of the war, but hard as these were to bear, there was alleviation for the heart pain in the thought that the men died fighting in a just and glorious cause, and that they lost their lives consciously facing death. Our boys had fought on every battle front, as well as on their natural element, the sea. Eight hundred of them, it is estimated, made the supreme sacrifice. To this huge toll New Year’s morning at one fell stroke added 200 more—two hundred men hurled into eternity through no fault of their own and with scarce a chance to save themselves.

And what is the story? Briefly, it is this:—Hundreds of our boys were getting home on New Year leave, and they were being rushed down to Kyle of Lochalsh where no adequate provision was made for their conveyance across the Minch by the Admiralty or the War Office, whom they had served so well. Between forty or fifty of those who reached Kyle on the Monday failed to get a passage to Stornoway and were stranded overnight at Kyle. Some 500 came on by train on Tuesday, so that altogether over 500 persons—soldiers, sailors, and civilians—in route for Stornoway were at Kyle on the last day of the year. This was beyond the capacity of the mail steamer Sheila, and H.M. Yacht Iolaire—parent ship of the Stornoway base—was sent to Kyle to assist. The soldiers and civilians and a few of the sailors were put on board the Sheila, and some 260 (all naval ratings) were assigned to the Iolaire, which in addition carried a crew of 23.

The company included many boys in their 'teens coming home on their first leave since enlistment. There were also there many veterans who had been mobilised in August, 1914, and were coming home from the ends of the earth on their first leave since the outbreak of hostilities. On the deck of the Iolaire men met with schoolmates whom they had not seen since together they rushed to the Colours four and a-half years ago. The older men were glad to meet with relatives whom they had left behind as pupils in the village school, now striplings in naval uniform. Two hours' steaming from Stornoway the New Year was welcomed in in time-honoured fashion. All were in high spirits. Gaelic song and sentiment called up to the mind visions of the warm welcome that awaited them round the blazing peat fires.

Nothing was further from their thoughts than death, and as the light on Arnish point, which marks the entrance to Stornoway harbour, drew near, many began getting their kit together, expecting in a very short time to be safely moored at the well-known wharf.

Suddenly there was a crash, and the ship heeled over to starboard. When she listed huge waves came breaking over her and 50 or 60 men jumped into the sea. All of them perished. Survivors state that they heard no orders given from the bridge, and the greatest confusion prevailed. It is also stated that the rockets to summon assistance were fired by one of the passengers—Alexander Maciver, Shader, Point, who himself perished in the wreck.

It was impossible in the pitch blackness to see the land, which, as it transpired, was less than 20 yards distant. When rocket lights were fired the landscape was lit up, and it was found that the stern of the vessel was only half a dozen yards from a ledge of rocks connecting with the shore. There was a tremendous rush of water between the stern and the rocks, but many men were tempted to try to reach the shore there, and scores of them were drowned or killed by being dashed
'Home at last,' they whispered, as glowed the shore lights bright;
'There lies the bay, and Arran Light is gleaming through the night.
Go get your kit-bags ready, for the voyage now is o'er,
And grand will be our welcome on our well-beloved shore.

'Home at last,' they mused, 'our sorrows now are fled.
Ahh! sweet will be the tale of our peat fires burned red,
And won't we tell the stories of the dreadful years now past,
Of all our wild adventures now we are home at last.'

They dreamed of lonely hameis by the edge of the moaning deep;
And the brooding moorland called to them as a mother to her child,
Their hearts were in the heather: they heard the voice and smiled—
Home at last!

They heared the sea-gulls screaming where the blue seas break in foam,
And the soft melo'dious ripple of the brooklet by their home;
And their hearts were full of music, and fair dreams hovered near,
Home at last!

For there were the lights of Stornoway, and yonder loomed the pier.

So near their home, and yet so far from it; never, nevermore
They'll roam the dreamy moondland or by the lone seashore—
Their's be the calm of heaven, the peace the world denied.

After Life's cruel tempest— the breath of eventide.

Home at last!'
on the rocks. As the ship settled down she turned broadside on to the shore, thus breaking the force of the seas amidships, and it was at this point all who were saved got off. Several swam ashore, and one man, John F. Macleod, Port of Ness, took with him a life-line by means of which a hawser was pulled ashore and made fast between the beach and the ship. About 30 or 40 men got ashore by hanging on to the rope, and altogether 75 men were saved from the wreck. The loss of life is therefore over 200, but the exact figures are not yet known, as, of course, there was no list of the passengers taken at Kyle. In many cases the relatives were not advised by the men to expect them, and there are instances where people who had gone to express sympathy with neighbours afterwards learning that their own sons or brothers were on board and had perished in the great catastrophe.

About 3 o'clock in the morning one of the survivors, in a dazed condition, made his way, he cannot tell how, to Stoneyfield farmhouse, where after rousing the inmates, he was hospitably received by Mr and Mrs Anderson Young. Mrs Young and her maids worked eagerly to prepare comforts for the shipwrecked men, who commenced to arrive in little groups, attracted by the lights now showing from the farmhouse windows. Everything possible was done for them, and the worst cases were put to bed, and were afterwards conveyed to the Sick Bay at the Battery. Those able to walk set out on foot for Stornoway, between two and three miles distant, where they roused relatives and obtained a change of clothes.

Soon the town was ringing with news of the frightful disaster, and many made their way to the scene. Taking the shorter way by the Sandwich Beach, evidence of the terrible happening was soon found, for along the shore portions of the wreckage were strewn, and here and there the body of a drowned man which had been cast up on the tide was found and carried beyond the reach of the sea.

It was still dark when the first of the townsfolk reached Holm, and there was a high sea running. The wreck was found lying between the Beasts of Holm and the shore. She had disappeared all but her masts, one of which was broken. Perched on the top of the remaining mast was one of the survivors, clinging in a most precarious position. Other two men had been on the mast with him, but they had become numb, fell off, and were drowned. Help for the plucky lad was impossible from the sea owing to the storm and the position of the wreck. From the land, help, too, was impracticable. Onlookers suffered intensely at their own helplessness to rescue the man, who was within speaking distance and threatened momentarily with death. As daylight came the storm abated and the sea grew calmer. Between 9 and 10 o'clock one of the patrol boats, by pouring oil on the sea, was able to get a small boat to the rescue, and the brave boy was taken off to the great relief of the crowds that watched his sufferings and admired his endurance. He was found to be Donald Morrison, 7 Knockard. He was, as can well be imagined, completely exhausted, but taken to the Lewis Hospital, he made a quick recovery.

A visit to the scene of the disaster on Thursday revealed a heartrending sight. After leaving the road as it turns into Holm Farm a walk of a few hundred yards brought one to the green sward overlooking the wreck. Here were gathered no idle sightseers, for all had come in quest of the remains of near relatives. On the grass were laid out the bodies that had been recovered from the sea, and below the crews of eight row-boats proceeded in silence with their work of dragging round the wreck. At very short intervals the grappling irons brought another and another of the bodies to the surface, and the crews proceeded with them to the ledge where they were being landed. Here they were placed on stretchers and slowly and laboriously the bearers clambered up with them to be laid out reverently on the grass lands above. Scarce a word was spoken, and the eyes of strong men filled with tears as the wan faces were scrutinised with mingled hope and fear of identification.

The remains as they were recovered were brought to a temporary mortuary at the Naval Barracks, where relatives of the missing men from all parts of the island gathered. As the bodies were identified they were handed over to the friends, and the little processions of carts in groups of two and three, each with its coffin, passed through the Barrack gates on their way to some mourning village for interment. Each day this week several unidentified bodies were buried at Sandwick Cemetery—on Tuesday there were seven of these.

The exact number of men on board was 284, of whom 79 survived, leaving 205 men missing. Of these 138 bodies have been recovered, 8 of whom have not been identified. All the officers of the ship were lost. From the mournful lists given elsewhere in these columns it will be seen that the ascertained Lewis loss is 174, of which Stornoway Parish lost 66, Barvas Parish 51, Uig Parish 24, and Lochs Parish 33. The remainder of the unfortunate victims were natives of Harris or members of the crew.
DECISION OF INQUIRY.

The great disaster formed the subject of a special Public Inquiry held in the Stornoway Sheriff Court House on 10th and 11th February. Sheriff-Principal Mackintosh presided, and the following jury were empanelled:—Messrs Malcolm Maclean, Point Street; A. R. Murray, Cromwell St.; George Morrison, Cromwell Street; Malcolm Ross, Francis St.; John Ross, Bayhead; Kenneth Mackenzie, Keith St.; and Angus Macleod, Keith St.

Mr J. C. Fenton, advocate, and Mr C. G. Mackenzie, Procurator-Fiscal, Stornoway, conducted the case for the Crown. Mr J. C. Pitman, advocate, Edinburgh, and Mr W. A. Ross, solicitor, Stornoway, appeared for the Admiralty; and Mr J. N. Anderson, solicitor, Stornoway, for some of the survivors and bereaved families.

The hearing of the evidence occupied the Court for two whole days, and at the close the jury, after an absence of over an hour, returned a unanimous verdict finding that the Iolaire went ashore and was wrecked on the rocks inside the "Beasts of Holm" about 1.55 on the morning of 1st January, resulting in the death of 205 men; that the officer in charge did not exercise sufficient prudence in approaching the harbour, that the boat did not slow down, and that a look-out was not on duty at the time of the accident; that the number of lifebelts, boats, or rafts was insufficient for the number of people carried, and that no orders were given by the officers with a view to saving life; and, further, that there was a loss of valuable time between the signals of distress and the arrival of life-saving apparatus in the vicinity of the wreck. They recommended (1) that drastic improvements should be made immediately for conveying the life-saving apparatus in the case of ships in distress; (2) that the Lighthouse Commissioners take into consideration the question of putting up a light on the Holm side of the harbour; and (3) that the Government will in future provide adequate and safe travelling facilities for naval ratings and soldiers. The jury desired to add that they were satisfied no one on board was under the influence of intoxicating liquor, and also that there was no panic on board after the vessel struck.

As a rider to their verdict they recommended to the Carnegie Trust and the Royal Humane Society, Seaman J. F. Macleod for some token of appreciation of his conduct in swimming ashore with a line, by means of which the hawser was brought ashore and many lives were saved.

The Jury also extended their sincerest sympathy to those who had lost relatives in this regrettable disaster, and also expressed their appreciation of the hospitality shown to the survivors by Mr and Mrs Anderson Young, Stoneyfield Farm.

Lost after a Miraculous Escape.

K E N N E T H M A C P H A I L, son of Mr Malcolm Macphail, 24 Arnol, Barvas, was the sole survivor of the merchant ship in which he was serving as gunner, when she was torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean in October, 1917. He had a terrible experience before he was rescued, having been nearly thirty-six hours in the sea before being washed ashore near Cherchell, Algeria. Notwithstanding his exceptionally strong physique, and the fact that he had a lifebelt on, he was practically exhausted, but was able to gather sufficient strength for the final effort to swim ashore. He was treated with great kindness by the French authorities and English lady missionaries, and made a speedy recovery. The photograph shows him with the little Arab messenger of the Mission Station. Pathetic in the extreme it is to think that this powerful seaman, after so miraculous an escape in the Mediterranean, perished within a few feet of his native island.
SUPPLEMENTARY.

The following names have been inadvertently omitted from their respective lists:—
